DEDICATION

As the United States of America is currently celebrating her bicentennial, we feel it especially appropriate at this time to dedicate this book to the memory of the many brave men of our family who risked, and in some cases lost, their lives fighting for the great cause of the American Revolution,

> "...in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity..."

An annotated listing of these honorable men appears as Appendix 1, toward the end of the book.

"A point to ponder: Your authors, both Witherells, are related as 10th cousins once removed. By coincidence, we were both born the same year (1943), in the same city (Athol, Mass.), in the same hospital (Lying-In). We became mutually acquainted genealogically in 1964, but didn't first meet in person until 1971!"

PREFACE

The publication of this book is the culmination of some twelve years of research. It is with considerable pleasure and pride that we have accomplished as much as we have, yet we, as genealogists, realize that a genealogical undertaking of a scope such as this one can never be entirely complete. We have still not exhausted all of the possible sources of information, for to do so would take several lifetimes. As for the information we do present, however, we have endeavoured to make it as accurate and detailed as practicable. Although we have faithfully tried to achieve accuracy, absolute freedom from errors cannot be expected, where so many names and dates are involved. Opportunities for error are many; they can occur in printing, typing, transcribing, or even in the original records.

Our research has indeed been a labor of love. We have spent long hours in correspondence; in the offices or homes of town clerks; at genealogical libraries; at county court houses; even in old grave-yards. The miles travelled in our pursuit number in the hundreds. The time we spent can never be completely remunerated financially, nor did we intend it to be. We undertook the research mostly to satisfy our own curiosity, but with the realization that it would be lost to others if it were not published. If other members of the family find the same pleasure and satisfaction in studying this genealogy, then we the authors shall feel repaid for the many years of patient work we have devoted to its compilation. Much of the material we have brought together in this volume, that is valuable now, will become more so with the passage of time; the names and deeds of those now living, as well as those of our predecessors, shall not be forgotten.

To individually acknowledge everyone who has helped in some way would require many pages. However, we feel we owe a special debt of gratitude for the valuable information contributed by Miss Winifred A. Johnson of Washington, D. C.; Orville M. Witherell of Westboro, Mass.; Dr. Donald R. Witherell of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Mrs. Maude (Wetherell) Borsenberger and Mrs. Marjorie (Wetherell) Barnett of Beardstown, Ill.; Mrs. Mildred Brunner of Opa-Locka, Fla.; and expecially the late Frank E. Wetherell of Des Moines, Iowa.

In the manner of arrangement of this book, we claim no originality, since we have chiefly followed in the footsteps of the pioneers who preceded us in compiling genealogies.

Finally, we must state frankly that we are well aware that this work is not complete in its account of some branches of the family, especially those without known New England roots. We sincerely hope that future genealogists will pick up the work where we are obliged to leave it, and continue it--that our widely-spread and firmly established ancestral tree may be up-dated for the benefit of generations yet unborn.

Inasmuch as we the authors have become a depository (of sorts) for "witherellia", we would welcome our readers to send us any additions or corrections you may have. If we cannot be reached at our current address, please direct an inquiry to the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston for a forwarding address.

SECTION I.

BACKGROUND

"And He shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." (Malachi 4:6)

CHAPTER 1. INTRODUCTION

Six ancient Witherells were coterminous with Plymouth Colony from its inception at Plymouth Bay, December 21, 1620, to its incorporation, and dissolution, into the Massachusetts Bay Colony, October 7, 1691.

We know that two resided within the Pilgrim state, Plymouth Colony. William Witherell, who arrived at Taunton as early as 1643 and was the first settler of Norton in 1669, and the Reverend William Witherell, who arrived in 1635, migrated to Duxbury in 1638 from Cambridge in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and later took up permanent residence in Scituate. John Witherell and his sister Sarah (Witherell) Fosdick both lived at Massachusetts Bay. The inscrutable Captain Weatherill at least once cast anchor along the rockbound New England coast, and the final adventurer was Sackford Wetherell. Of each of these, more will be said.

Sackford Wetherell (or Seckford Wetherill) was born in 1603 in England, to ____ Wetherill and Judith Rowe. His history belongs more to the Virginia Colony at Jamestown, where he was listed under Captain John Martin's muster of the ship Swan in 1624, when he was but twenty-one.[1] John Martin was one of the earlier, well known Jamestown adventurers.

Sackford had a titled heritage. One of his grandparents was Dame Rebecca Seckford, who was married to Sir Henry Seckford, a knight.[2]

Our young Sackford did visit New England at least once, however. "John Povy's letter and the minutes of the Virginia Council show a plantation at Damrills Cove [Damariscove, Maine] frequented by vessels from Virginia."[3] Among the names mentioned as being there between 1622 and 1626 was Sackford Wetherell, along with Capt. John Smith and others. It's likely Sackford made other stops along the New England coast, perhaps at Plymouth, where the Swan made at least one early stop, and also at Wessagusset [Weymouth].

He was a bumptious character, or at least travelled in a controversial crowd. Captain Martin was often in one scrape or another at Jamestown. One conflict led to a court investigation at which Sackford testified. From the records of the Virginia Colony Court held October 25, 1624, "Sackford Wetherell sworne and examined sayeth...that he hath harde Mr. Rastell promise to keepe five men of Captain Martin's abourde and to give them tickets to be received abourde..."[4]

There could also be a connection between Sackford Wetherell and Thomas Weston, an early agent of the Pilgrims. Weston, who had a propensity for conflict, in 1621-2 chose a Thomas Wetherall, a merchant of London, as an arbitor in the Pickering vs. Weston case.[5] Pickering was Weston's business agent in Holland, and a falling out led to the above litigation. Thomas Wetherall had some business interests touching on Weston's, which induced Weston to choose him as arbitor. Weston, not incidentally, sent the Charity and the Swan (Sackford's ship) to New England in 1622. On that voyage, about the time Sackford was employed on the Swan, it ran aground at Damariscove, and heavy damage was paid to the very same Captain Martin for "a ship-load of tobacco spoiled."[6] Only speculation can tie Sackford Wetherell and the above Thomas Wetherall together. Unfortunately, Sackford then disappeared.

Dame Rebecca Seckford mentions in her will,[7] proved June 6, 1631, among others, her grand children Rebecca, John, and Brandon Wetherill. Presumably Sackford Wetherell, sibling of the above, was by then deceased. His connection to other New England Witherells is not known, but he undoubtedly was the first of the name to voyage to the New World. He left no known descendants, and no further trace.

Another, more puzzling, visitor was "Captain Weatherill." It is recorded[8] that he set sail from the Downs in England on March 27, 1630, as Commander of the 80 ton barque Warwick, and arrived in New England (at "Pascataqua") about June 1st, a little in advance of the famous Winthrop Fleet. The following year, the Warwick arrived at Nantucket on March 14th from Pascataqua and Salem, where she had been to sell corn she had carried from Virginia. She arrived at Winysemett five days later, then embarked for Virginia on April 9th. On July 4, 1631, John Dunton, Master, sailed the Warwick to Virginia, where it arrived September 9th and remained for several years. There is also mention of the Warwick running aground off Dorchester at Massachusetts Bay in the 1630's, and the craft was condemned on June 30, 1636. The present Commercial Street in Dorchester was formerly called "Barque Warwick Street." Whatever happened to the Captain isn't known. Presumably, he also died without leaving a trace or any known New England descendants.

Sarah (Wetherell) Fosdick [see Section II, no. 2] arrived at Massachusetts Bay in 1634/5. Through her son, John Fosdick, many present-day Fosdicks descended. Her grand son, Capt. Samuel Fosdick of New London, Conn., married Mercy Picket, sister of Adam Picket who married Hannah Wetherell (no. 26).[9] It isn't known when Sarah died, but the last mention of her was in 1664, when she was then 75. It appears she lived her entire New World life in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Her brother, John Witherell [see Section II, no. 3] also lived entirely within Massachusetts Bay. It isn't known when he first arrived, but he was in Sudbury in 1639. He removed to Newtown [Cambridge] shortly thereafter, and died in Watertown in 1672. He had one single daughter, Mary, who died in her twentieth year; therefore, John had no known descendants to carry on his line. It's speculated that he was the same person as John Witherley, Master of the ship Hercules which brought the Rev. William Witherell and his family to New England.

Rev. William Witherell [see also Chapter 4, and Section II, no. 5] arrived at Charlestown in Massachusetts Bay in 1634/5, the same year his presumed sister Sarah (Witherell) Fosdick arrived. They could therefore have sailed in the same ship, the Hercules, which their brother John Witherell might have commanded. Rev. William soon, however, moved to Cambridge. Then in 1638, he migrated to Plymouth Colony at Duxbury. Shortly thereafter, he took up permanent residence further north, along the coast, in Scituate. He died in Scituate in 1684, seven years before the end of the little colony. His descendants bearing the surname are legion, but most have now dispersed from Scituate and areas immediately surrounding. Our genealogy section includes over 1100 of them. However, the total number of his descendants must be greater by several fold, inasmuch as they bear other surnames.

The last of the early Witherells to cross the Atlantic into New England history was William Witherell of Taunton, Plymouth Colony, about whom Chapter 5 is devoted. [See also Section II, no. 7]. He is presumed nephew of the Reverend William Witherell, [10] and his descendants are even more numerous. The 1850 census of Norton, Mass. [which split off from Taunton], for example, included seven Wetherell families among the 410 families listed; of 1886 persons, 32 (1.7%) were Wetherells. A large proportion of the remaining families undoubtedly also could claim William as their ancestor. Our book includes the names of more than 1300 of William Witherell's descendants that bear his surname.

The Old Colony, or new Plimouth, as it occasionally was called, was comprised of the present-day Barnstable, Plymouth, and Bristol counties, and those lands lying east of Blackstone River and Narragansett Bay.

The Pilgrims who founded Plymouth Colony were of a small hand of religious separatists, or independents in England, who believed that any group of believers should be able to establish a church and worship God as they saw fit, without outside interference.

The Puritans who settled Massachusetts Bay, on the other hand, believed in a strong central religious authority, although they differed with the conformists in England in regard to church ritual, which eventually led to their migration to the New World, and the settling of Boston in 1630.

Not all of the later Plymouth Colony settlers shared the Pilgrim's separatist views, but they continued to live, and even thrive, under Plymouth's laisez-faire approach to her citizens. Before the demise of the colony, there had been established within her sixteen towns: Barnstable, Bridgewater, Bristol, Duxbury, Eastham, Little Compton, Marshfield, Middleboro, Plymouth, Rehoboth, Rochester, Sandwich, Scituate, Swansea, Taunton, and Yarmouth.

Each town has its own unique history, forged out of the wilderness and the strength of her earliest struggles. Together, these sixteen towns, and their later offshoots, have taken the Pilgrim's story and ideas, and blended with them Cape Cod sand, scrub pine, clapboard-covered cottages, a slow, if enduring economy, and combined them all on her beloved and bountiful shores to create, even today, a "separate colony."

There were, of course, other immigrants of Witherell/Wetherell/Wetherill blood who came later from England to America.

Christopher Wetherill (born probably in the late 1630's) and his son John (b. May 3, 1677) came from Sherburne, County York, England to Burlington, New Jersey in 1683, where he established himself as a farmer. He gave land for the first Quaker meeting house there. A man of considerable substance, he became a leader in his community, and was appointed to many positions of trust. He later moved to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where many of his descendants have since lived, several reaching considerable commercial prominence. Christopher was the son of Thomas Wetherell (minor in 1624; bur. Dec. 28, 1672) of Parish of All Saints, Newcastle-on-Tyne; the son of Christopher Wetherell (bur. Parish Church of Stockton-on-Tees, County Durham, May 25, 1622 and Mary Watson; the son of Tyles (or Giles) Wetherell (b. ca. 1520-60; will proved Aug. 18, 1604), of Stockton-on-Tees. Inasmuch as their genealogy has been published,[11] no further mention of this line need be made here.

Probably some time between 1750-1797, Capt. Nathaniel Wetherell, a sea captain, sailed out of Liverpool, England, and settled in Worcester, Mass. His son Nathaniel Jr. (b. Feb. 22, 1767) had 7 children. Since this line settled initially in New England, we have included something of their genealogy in Section II, as Supplementary List 69.

In December, 1773, Sam Wetherell (or Wetherill), a bricklayer from Lincolnshire, England, came on the ship Elizabeth to Virginia and served as an indentured servant for four years.[12] We know nothing further of him.

We know of two other New England arrivals from England which therefore merit supplementary lists of their own (SL 20 and SL 68, respectively), namely Anderson Witherell (b. England, Feb. 22, 1783) and Thomas Wetherell (b. England, 17__). Both settled in Vermont, probably some time between 1800-1810, and left descendants.

In April, 1810, Richard Wetherill came to America and became a wealthy manufacturer in three Pennsylvania townships--Chester, Lower Marion, and Concord. He was born at Rich Hill, County Armaugh, Ireland, April 12, 1788, but his parents were originally from Yorkshire, England. He and his wife Phoebe Ann (Delany) Wetherill had 12 children, of which 3 sons and 2 daughters reached adulthood. The genealogy of this line has been published,[13] and will not receive further attention here.

Some time between 1818-20, William Peter Wetherill (b. Eschington, Lincolnshire, England, 17__) removed with his wife Ann (Fountaine) (d. Aug. 26, 1859) to New York, then to Virginia, then to Vermillion (or Mansfield), Ohio, then (ca. 1845) to Kenton, Ohio. Their two sons, William Fountaine Wetherill (b. Dec. 31, 1806-7, d. July 7, 1883) and John Robinson Wetherill (b. March 19, 1809, d. Apr. 28, 1898), both born in England, also immigrated and left numerous descendants.[14]

In 1829, three brothers--John, Robert, and Joseph Wetherell, and in 1834 a fourth brother, George--came from England to settle in America.[15] All were sons of Thomas Wetherell, Jr. (b. England, Nov. 1, 1790, d. Apr. 9, 1878; bur. at Witton-le-Wear), who was son of Thomas Wetherell (b. County Durham, May 14, 1759, d. June 6, 1844; bur. at St. Helens, Bishop Aukland).[15] John Wetherell (b. England, June 25, 1801) settled in Pittsburgh, Pa., and left seven children. Robert Wetherell (b. England, Apr. 29, 1803, d. Dec. 20, 1875) settled near Pennsville, Ohio and left three children. Joseph Wetherell (b. England, March 9, 1807, d. Dec. 27, 1891) came first to Pittsburgh, Pa., next to Malta, Ohio, and finally settled in Parkersburg, Va., leaving six children. George Wetherell (b. Sunderland Bridge, County Durham, Feb. 25, 1811, d. June 29, 1897) came with his son William, and settled near Malta, Ohio. Four other children were also born to him.[16]

About 1830, another John Wetherell, from Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, settled in Victor, N. Y., and had six children.[17] He later fought in the Civil War, was captured during the Battle of Bull Run, and died in Andersonville Prison.

Another Thomas Wetherell (b. England, 1824, d. 1900) settled in Liberty Mills, Mich. by about 1850, and had 13 children.[18]

No doubt there were other immigrants also. Our book, however, is concerned only with those who came to the New England colonies. To consider the genealogy of all American immigrants of the surname Witherell/Wetherell/Wetherill/Witherill (and similar spellings) would no doubt require a lifetime of research, and several books this size. We leave that task for future genealogists. Most of the names mentioned in our genealogy, therefore, are descendants of Rev. William Witherell and his nephew William Witherell, both of Plymouth Colony (Scituate and Taunton, respectively). The genealogies of other immigrants to New England, of the surname, are also included as "Supplementary Lists," as well as the genealogies of whose oldest known forebear lived in New England, regardless of whether he be an immigrant, or the son of some unknown Witherell belonging to our "main line."

Throughout the book, we have denoted a married woman's maiden surname in parentheses, as is customary. For example, Mary (Jenkins) Lewis [see Elizabeth Witherell, no. 12] was Mary Jenkins before she married George Lewis.

In the Genealogy Section (Section II), we have devised a system of numbering which enables the reader to readily determine the relationship between any two numbered invididuals. Suppose, for example, we wish to determine the degree of relationship between, say, George Witherell, Jr. (b. Norton, Mass., 1773; no. 416) and John Wetherell (b. Norton, Mass., 1777; no. 516). Turning to the pages on which these names occur, we find that George's "call numbers" (numbers in parentheses representing his lineage back to the beginning of the genealogy) are 195, 100, 47, 17, 7, 4, 1; John's are 248, 120, 20, 7, 4, 1. The key to determining relationship is to count the number of pairs of numbers not shared in common. In our particular example, 7, 4, and 1 are the only numbers shared in common, and there are four pairs of numbers which differ. George and John were therefore 4th cousins. If no pairs of numbers differ, the two are siblings (both have the same lineage); if one pair differs, the two are 1st cousins; if two pairs differ, 2nd cousins; 3 pairs, 3rd cousins; 4 pairs, 4th cousins, etc.

If one were to ask whether any family members have appeared as characters in novels, the answer would be "yes." Fictional works which mention the surname include the classic Ivanhoe, and a lesser known novel, Coniston. In Sir Walter Scott's Ivanhoe, there is an account of a Steven Wetherall being slain by Richard Coeur-de-Lion, in a family strife between Richard and his brother John. The American novelist Winston Churchill (1871-1947) published in 1906 a novel, Coniston,[19] which concerns a fictional character named William Wetherell who works in a jewelry shop and has literary aspirations. This novel may have some basis of truth, inasmuch as many Wetherells living in Attleboro and North Attleboro, Mass. have been in the jewelry business.

There have been also at least two novelists who have adopted a Wetherell pen-name. June Pat Wetherell is the pen name used by Mrs. Daniel Platt Frame. Two of her best-known novels were Shut the Door Behind You, and But That Was Yesterday. More famous, perhaps, was the writer Susan Warner (1819-1885), who used Elizabeth Wetherell for her nom-de-plume. She was the author of several fictional works, including The Wide, Wide World (1850) her best known, which in its day was said to have ranked next to Uncle Tom's Cabin in popularity.

One Final Note: Being New Englanders by birth and nurture ourselves, and having visited hundreds of New England towns and villages, we the authors can honestly say that we have come to know and appreciate the unique character of the region and its people. Most Witherells, historically, have chosen to live in the towns, not the cities. For anyone wishing to "know" the people of our book, who "were" the New England town, what could be more enjoyable than a leisurely tour of the villages our ancestors helped build.

CHAPTER 2. ORIGIN OF THE SURNAME

Introduction of surnames into England

When William of Normandy, popularly known as William the Conqueror, invaded England in 1066 and defeated Harold at the Battle of Hastings, he unknowingly hastened the widespread use of surnames in England. The Celts, Angles, Saxons, and Scandinavians, alternately invading and settling the island for centuries, had been, up until 1066, using a single, non-hereditary name for each individual. But with the Norman invasion, their Old English personal names were soon superseded by the new Christian names from the continent. Then, with between 1-1/2 to 2 million people in England at the time, and only a limited number of popular by-names to go around, the countryside began to adopt the French system. Individuals picked a surname to differentiate themselves from others of the same personal name. The French had been using surnames since ca. 1000 A.D. Thus, if there were more than one William in town, there would be confusion as to which William was which. So one William, a blacksmith, might choose as his distinguishing surname Smith, thereby becoming William Smith. The other William, likewise desiring differentiation, and who was the son of Peter, might choose the surname Peterson; he became William Peterson.

There were four broad categories of surnames in England, some overlapping. William Smith, our blacksmith mentioned above, plucked his name out of the "surname of occupation or office" list. His neighbor, William Peterson, chose his from the "surname of relationship" classification. Another, catch-all category was "surnames from nick-name or personal characteristics." So now we have a William Goodman in town, a very Christian and friendly fellow. The last, and largest, group was the "surname from place of origin." Now, the last William on the street, not wanting to be confused with his neighbors William Smith, William Peterson, and William Goodman, chose to name himself after his village, and so called himself William de Wetheral, or literally, "William from the village Wetheral."

At first these surnames were not hereditary. There could be two unrelated blacksmiths in town, one called William Smith and the other John Smith. By the same logic, there could have been another John in town who chose his surname Wetheral. There would, then, be two unrelated Wetheral's in the village. Gradually, surnames became hereditary. The process, as usual, began around London and the south of England, then inexorably moved north. The Normans didn't effectively control the north until the twelfth century; their influence in the English highlands always lagged behind their grip in the southern counties. But by the early fifteenth century, the French preposition "de" had been dropped from place surnames in the northern counties, and they had become hereditary. Our William de Wetheral now became simply William Wetheral, and he passed his last name on to his descendants.

The Parish of Wetheral, Cumberland County

Nearly every authority, and practically all lines of evidence pin-point the origin of the surname Witherell (Wetherell, etc.) in northern England. Specifically, our name drifts back and disappears into the clouds of time hovering over the little parish of Wetheral in Cumberland County.

Frank E. Wetherell (Families from Village Wetheral, 1948) states that he read in a history of the Norman conquest of 1066 (the actual book wasn't noted) that "William (the Conqueror) returned to England, taking with him several of his knights, among whom were...[several names] and Sir George Wetherell." This is the only fleeting evidence that the name might have a Norman origin. Delquist, in These Names of Ours, believes the name came from wyth-er-all, meaning "courageous little man." "Wyth," or "with," came from the Welsh Cornish element, meaning courageous; "er" meant man; "all" came from the Norman-French meaning little. However, we have not seen any other source placing the family in either Normandy or Wales. Further, we would question the juxtaposition of the Norman and Welsh elements. So let's return to the parish of Wetheral.

When the Romans ruled England nearly 2,000 years ago, they had quarries near the village on the west bank of the river Eden. They also built Hadrian's Wall only a few miles north, stretching from the Irish Sea to the North Sea, in a vain attempt to keep the invaders from Scotland out of England.

The Romans left England about 400 A.D., leaving it for a short time in the hands of the Celts. But by the fifth century A.D., the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes had invaded England from Germany. The Celts were quickly driven back into Wales and Scotland. These Germanic tribes then ruled England for centuries afterward. They were especially powerful in the southern counties. After repeated and increasingly violent attacks from the Viking Norsemen in the ninth century, the Anglo-Saxons, temporarily, had to relinquish a large slice of their country to the Norse influence. The Danes, as the Anglo-Saxons called them, were particularly vigorous in the north. In time, the country was again united, with many of the invading Norse settling down in their newly adopted country.

Regardless of whether England was being invaded from the sea, the border between England and Scotland was under constant dispute, and was forever shifting. King William Rufus finally drove the Scots back, rebuilt Carlisle, settled the area with his peoples, and put Rudolph Menchin in charge of the district, known as the "honor of Carlisle," and made Menchin the Lord of Carlisle.

Scenes from the village Wetheral, County Cumberland, England (from a post card).

Soon after, in 1093, Lord Menchin gave a foundation charter to the Benedictine Order. By 1106, this order had sent from York a prior and twelve monks to establish the Priory of Wetheral, within the Parish of Wetheral. The priory is now in ruins, but in the original charter, the name was written "Wetherhala." This was about, or soon after 1093 A.D. It was also found as "Wetherhal," "Wederhale," and "Wedderell." The village is still today spoken of as "Wedderal" by those of its inhabitants who use the local dialect.

The name undoubtedly existed before the charter was given, but this is the earliest date, 1093, that we have seen it written. Local historians, however, are practically certain that there was a little community living there since the third or fourth century A.D., and perhaps even earlier. In 1848, Wetheral Parish, four miles east of Carlisle on the west bank of the Eden River, was described as containing six villages and had a population of 3,167, distributed over an area nine miles long by five miles wide containing 13,000 acres. The present population of the village Wetheral itself is only about 800. Some of the names located there were Wetheral Church, Wetheral Parish, Wetheral Abbey, Wetheral Priory, and Wetheral Cross. Some other names found in the area are Wetheral Pasture, Wetheral Mill, Wetheral Gate, Wetheral Shield, and Wetheral Green.

Perhaps also of significance are the rock-hewn caves to be found in Wetheral. These presumably existed during the time of the monks, and were probably used as a place of safety during the border clashes, which continued up to the 1600's.

The inhabitants of the region around Wetheral were distinct. Because of the unrelenting invasions from the Norsemen, especially along the eastern central and northern coasts of England, and the fact that the Angles, Saxons, Jutes, and Normans concentrated their power and population generally in the south, the racial stock in the thinning neck between England and Scotland was primarily Norse, or Scandinavian. The Normans didn't effectively control this region until the twelfth century. Furthermore, most of the place names to be found there today still sing of the Scandinavian influence.

Authorities agree with the original supposition that our ancestors came from these sheep covered, Norse settled English highlands. Lower's Patronymica Britanica believes that the Witherells trace their name to the County of Durham, and earlier to the Parish of Wetheral in Cumberland County. Frank E. Wetherell, in his visit to the region back in the 1940's, found a Dictionary of Family Names in the library in Carlisle which states the same belief as Lower. Charles Wareing Bardsley, in A Dictionary of English and Welsh Surnames (Henry Forwde, London, 1901) defines "Wetherall, Wetherell, Wetherill: local, ' of Wetheral,' a parish near Carlisle." Further, Elsdon C. Smith, in Dictionary of American Family Names

(Harper & Bros., N. Y., 1956) says "Wetherell, Wetherill, Wetherall, Wetherald (Eng.) [also, Witherell (Eng.) a variant of Wetherell] One who came from Wetheral... in Cumberland." P. H. Reaney, in A Dictionary of British Surnames (Routledge and Kegan Paul, London, 1958) says merely that the name comes "From Wetheral (Cumb.)." Decisively, Henry Harrison, in Surnames of the United Kingdom (Morland Press, London, 1918) writes "Wetherall, Wetherell, Wetherill... As the Cumberland Wetheral..." and also believes the name "is evidently of Scandinavian origin."

Now that we have determined with reasonable satisfaction where we got our name, what does the name mean?

Etymology of the word "Wetheral"

To decipher the etymological roots of the place name Wetheral might cause more confusion than enlightenment, but an attempt will be made. Surnames, on occasion, can reveal hints concerning a family's past.

The various authorities generally agree on the broad interpretation of the name Wetheral. They do differ somewhat on specifics. Elsdon C. Smith defines the word in his Dictionary as an "enclosure where sheep were kept" or "dweller" near an enclosure where sheep were kept."

Another authority in the field, E. Ekwall, in Studies on English Place Names (1936) strips the word to its basic roots. He defines "wether" as coming from the Old English word "weder." meaning a castrated ram. P. H. Reaney also defines "wether" as deriving from the Old English word "weder," meaning "wether, sheep, ram." Ekwall, however, in his Oxford Dictionary of English Place Names, goes further to define the compound word Wetheral as a "haugh where wethers were kept." We have previously defined "wether." Ekwall now defines "haugh" as "a piece of flat alluvial land by the side of a river," or "land in a corner formed by a bend." According to this logic, the village sheep herders would call such a place a wether haugh, then hyphenate the compound word into wether-haugh, and eventually close it into wetherhaugh.

From a different angle, Henry Harrison arrives at a slightly divergent definition. He starts off like Ekwall and Reaney by defining "wether" as the Old English "weder" meaning sheep, and similarly to Ekwall finds the suffix to be spelled "h(e)al(h)" meaning nook. But, significantly, as a compound word, "wetherh(e)al(h)," he finds it to mean "dweller at the wether-nook, or -corner." Harrison also fills out the word in Scandinavian or Old Norse, "vedr + hall-r," meaning "dweller at the wether (or sheep) slope." As the village Wetheral lies up on the steep banks of the Eden, this could have some validity. He believes the name is of Scandinavian origin.

Frank E. Wetherell, in his random but fruitful research, quotes from two letters he received concerning our surname. They too circle about the same definitions as Smith, Ekwall, Reany, and Harrison. The first letter comes from the Rev. C. M. Lowtherbouch, of Clifton Rectory, Penrigh, County Cumberland, England. We quote:

> "The name Wetheral is probably Old Norse, 'wether' meaning ram; and Old English 'hath' meaning low lying ground by a river. The local family obviously takes its name from the place. I think they are much more likely to be of Norse, rather than Norman origin. The Conqueror (William the Conqueror) never reached here. This land only finally became part of England in the middle of the 12th century. Very few of our local families are of Norman descent."

The final letter comes from Herbert J. Wetherill of Philadelphia, Pa.:

> "The earliest form that we have found is Witherhold. Brand's History of New Castle-on-Tyne, Vol. 2, p. 384, states: 'John Witherhold was bailiff of Newcastle in 1259 and continued in office for two years. This early spelling of the name indicates its derivation; it is the name of the place where the family first settled and was a 'keep' or 'stronghold' to which the cattle, wethers, etc. were driven during the time of the Scotch Invasion (1173)..."

Frank E. Wetherell, in his own words, says that some Wetherells have told him that the name came from "Witherhold," meaning a sheep pen.

Orville M. ("Bud") Witherell (no. 1885), who also has done much research on the family says that "Originally cattle and wethers [sheep] were driven to this place [Wetheral] for safety and it was known as a 'keep' or 'stronghold.' Hence, its earliest name 'Wetherhold'." Incidentally, both Frank E. Wetherell and Bud Witherell have visited the parish of Wetheral. Dorothy (Witherell) Squires (no. 2252), sister of one of us (Edwin), stopped by there with her husband in 1972. They all agree it is a picturesque little parish.

By looking at the etymology of the word "Wetheral", we have come across varied spellings: Witherhold, Wetherhath, Wetherhealh, and Wetherhaugh. By recognizing its component parts and their definitions, we have surfaced enough definitions to please most historical tastes: "stronghold where cattle and sheep were kept," "a sheep pen," "dweller at the sheep slope," or "dweller at the sheep nook or corner," "a piece of flat alluvial land by the side of a river or land in a corner formed by a bend where sheep were kept," and finally, "an enclosure where sheep were kept," or "dweller near an enclosure where sheep were kept." No wonder the orthography of our name has varied so much.

Let us now take a chronological sampling of how the name has been spelled, both as a place name and surname, up to 1600:

1093 A.D.	Wetherhale, Wederhale, Wederhall
1100 A.D.	Wetherhala
1131 A.D.	Wederhale
1170 A.D.	Wederale
1200 A.D.	William de Wetheral, Wulfrid de Wetheral, Humphrey de Wetheral
1229 A.D.	Wetherhal(e)
1245 A.D.	John, son of William de Wetheral
1250 A.D.	Stephen de Wetheral
1251	Wedirhall, -hala, -hal
1257	The Lady Dionysia de Wetheral
1259	John Witherhold, Bailiff of Newcastle-on-Tyne
1291	Wedirhale
1303	Adam, son of Roger de Wetheral
1308	Wedral
1323	Wedrehale, Wedyrhale
1332	Wederhalle, Richard de Wederhal
1333	Robert de Wetheral
1380	Wethirhalle
1429	William Wethereld, Wetherald, Wetherold
1509	Woderhall
1530	Richard Wedderhall, a prior; Wedrall
1538	Wethirhall
1551	Christening of Dorothy ye daughter of Wilyam Wedderhelte
1552	Waddrels
1560	Giles Wetherell of Stockton-On-Tees born
1584	Sir James Wetherall of Kelfield, York Co., England
1589	Sarah Witherell (no. 2 in Genealogy Section) born
1594	John Witherell (no. 3 in Genealogy Section) born

Some other ancient names include:

Hugh de Wederhale
Humfrey de Wederhall
Adam de Wederhale

Other variant spellings are: Wetherald, Wetherall, Wetherell, Wetherill, Wetheril, Wetherilt, Weatherall, Weatherell, Weatherill, Weatherilt, Weatheritt, Weatherhill, Weathrall, Wederell, Wetheral, Wedderelt, Wethereld, Witherell, Witherill, Witherall, and Witherle.

There is, obviously, no correct spelling.

In the United States, most main lines have settled on one form or another. The two main lines, descended from the Rev. William Witherell (no. 5) of Scituate, Plymouth Colony, and William Witherell (no. 7) of Taunton, Plymouth Colony, respectively, have quite exclusively used Witherell and Wetherell, although one individualistic branch has used Witherill, and another offshoot Witherle. Notwithstanding these two exceptions, anyone spelling the name Witherell can be considered descended from one of these two main New England families. The form Wetherell appears throughout many lines. It must be added that in the early years these two Plymouth Colony families used numerous spellings before settling on Witherell, Wetherell, Witherill, or Witherle. We have included these variations under each male heading in the Genealogy Section, where appropriate.

Anyone with the spelling "Wetherill" probably descends from either Christopher Wetherill, William Peter Wetherill, or Richard Wetherill (see Introductory Chapter). These spellings are particularly prevalent in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

There are other less frequently found spellings of the name in the United States. If they are found under the variant spellings listed above, they too might be connected to the "Wetheral clan," but under separate main lines.

Significance of the surname

What have we learned from investigating the history of our surname? It is a "surname of place of origin." From this we can deduce we are all from northern England, in or near the parish of Wetheral. Once the location is fixed, we can assume from the area's ancient history that we have some Norse of Scandinavian blood in us.

Then what of the etymology of the word "Wetheral"? The emphasis is on the word "wether." No doubt many of our ancestors were sheep herders, and lived near a sheep nook, corner, or slope. Continuing our focus on the suffix "haugh," we can surmise that in this border region there was value in keeping the sheep penned into a stronghold or safe place. We could suppose that from such caution the area around Wetheral was ofttimes violent and hazardous for both sheep and man. There were constant skirmishes with the Scots over the nearby border, extending far back into Roman times, so there is some logic to this flight of imagination.

Perchance was it such a fear of this constant turmoil that led our namesakes away from their mother village? For soon we find them moving to the east and southeast, down the coast of England. Charles Wetherill of Philadelphia, Pa., along with George W. Marshall and W. Bleddys Powell, in their well-researched book entitled Records, English and Colonial of the Wetherill Family (1897, privately printed; copies can be found of this limited edition in the New England Historic Genealogical Society Library in Boston, and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library on Locust St., Philadelphia, Pa.) state that the family soon moved to Northumberland County to the east and York County to the southeast. They later were found in Durham and Lincoln Counties, and by 1650 were as far south as London.

But the subject of this chapter lived centuries earlier. The old Norseman, his fierce, conquering blood thinned by generations of settlement in his adopted country, wanted to choose a surname to set him apart from the other Williams in the parish Wetheral. His neighbors had already chosen to be called William Smith, William Peterson and William Goodman. Then one day, standing amongst his bleating sheep, high on the slope above the Eden River he cast about toward the village clustered nearby and said quietly to himself, "I'm William de Wetheral, William from the parish Wetheral."

CHAPTER 3. COAT OF ARMS

Armorial beginnings

When knights errant clattered off to battle in Olde England, it was difficult to identify individuals in the vast bobbing sea of faceless metal. In time, surcoats were droped over the warrior's heavy body armor, both to keep off the sun's heat and to prevent the protective metal from rusting. Still, it was impossible to tell one--now cloth-bound--knight from another. So, born out of necessity, designs were then described on the surcoats--each of a different pattern. Now, every knight authorized by the king to bear arms had his individual symbol boldly stitched to his armor coat. Thus we have a "coat of arms."

When not in battle, the knights gathered at colorful tournaments in which they tested and refined their manly arts. At such gala affairs, a herald would marshall the combatants, introduce them in turn, and conduct the jostle. The herald, as the king's representative, also undertook other, related duties; he declared peace--and war; he conducted public processions; in time, it was his assigned, official duty to journey throughout the countryside, sanctioning arms already in use, or conferring them upon those who had none. Accordingly, the term heraldry became interchangeable with armorial bearings or coats of arms.

Heraldic achievement arose, as did surnames, after the Norman invasion of England in 1066. It is not surprising, then, that the technical description of the armorial achievement, called the blazon, is in French. And, like surnames, coats of arms were not at first hereditary, but soon became so. An historical family would keep the original design, but might augment it, or make additions to it, when a sovereign honored them, or an important family event occurred.

Military leaders wore a crest, or identifying emblem, upon their helmets for further identification. Gradually, all knights, whether they were chiefs or not, wore their distinctive marks above their metallic masks. These symbols were later transferred to the coats of arms and placed above the escutcheon, atop a helmet.

Mottoes, unlike the coat of arms (shield, helmet, and crest) are not hereditary, and are not conferred nor authorized by any sovereign. They are a matter of family choice, and are whimsical additions to, but not officially a part of, any particular coat.

It is testament to the antiquity of any coat of arms when the earliest version of the arms does not bear a crest. At first, only chiefs wore crests upon their helmets. Later on, when all knights and warriors added them to their battle dress, the helmet and crest were cast atop the family coat of arms also. Today, nearly all modern armorial bearings include a crest.

Witherell coat of arms

The Witherell coat of arms is ancient in heraldic age; the earliest rendition is not adorned with a crest, but is resolute in its own simplicity.

Heraldic terminology cannot--and need not--be mastered in such a short chapter. The art is so engrossed in its own discipline that it is best left up to the reader to learn as much as his patience will bear. There are many fine books on the subject in any large library.

The terminology, or blazon, of what is probably the original Witherell coat of arms is:

"Argent two lions passant guardant sable a chief gules."
It can be found in The General Armory of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, by Sir Bernard Burke (London, 1884), p. 1096.

Reworded in more readable form, the above arms becomes: The tincture, or color, of the shield is silver. The figures or devices placed upon the shield--called a charge--are two black lions walking, three paws on the ground, the right forepaw being raised, the lions' head facing the spectator, and the tail curved over the beasts' back. This is the principal charge. The secondary charge placed upon the escutcheon is a red chief, which is also called an ordinary charge. The chief cuts across and occupies the upper third of the shield, and in this blazon is colored red. See drawing A.

From this basic description, all future Witherell arms derive. Similarly to the place name "wether haugh" or Wetheral, from which we get our surname (see Chapter 2), all future coats of arms descend from the above blazon.

In the herald's visitation to York County, England, in 1584 A.D. (ed. Foster, pp. 586, 633) is mentioned a James or Sir James Wetherall of Kelfield. His blazon is:

"...two lions rampant sable a chief gules."

The tincture of Sir James Wetherall's shield is not given, but we shall assume it was colored like all other recorded family arms, silver. Charged upon this shield are two black lions, erect, one hind paw on the ground, the other three paws raised, the beast looking forward and having tail erect. The ordinary charge is the same as the original: a red chief--the upper third of the shield--colored red. See drawing B.

The last four coats of arms we shall look at each have unique augmentations. Unlike the first two, they all have a black, not red, chief. Beyond that they all have further changes.

Charles Wetherill, in his Records, English and Colonial of the Wetherill Family (co-authored with George W. Marshall and W. Bleddyn Powell, 1897, privately printed in Philadelphia, Pa.) did extensive research into the Witherell coat of arms. His diligent English researchers dug up Sir James Wetherall's coat of arms described above. They also found the armorial achievement of Richard Wetherall of the city of Lincoln, England, a son of Richard and grandson of John Wetherill of Ascrigge in Wainesdale, York County, England. Richard Wetherall represents his coat of arms as:

"Argent two lions passant sable on a chief of the last three covered cups or."

Simply put, the shield is colored silver. Two black lions are again charged upon the shield. They are walking, three paws on the ground, the right forepaw being raised, the head looking forward, and the tail curved over the back. The chief ordinary charge is colored black. Upon the chief are charged three golden goblets with stem and foot and dome-shaped covers. See drawing C.

Frank E. Wetherell (Families from Village Wetheral, 1949 supplement, p. 44), who, like Charles Wetherill, did much research in England, believes that the augmentation of the three goblets occurred when one member of the family was a butler to a king, and was granted the cups by the sovereign. It would be interesting to discover who the manservant Witherell was, and whom he served.

According to Charles Wetherill, his direct ancestor, Christopher Wetherill brought with him to Burlington, New Jersey, in 1683, the following arms:

"Argent two lions passant guardant sable on a chief indented of the last three covered cups or."

To the above, a crest was later added:

"A demi-lion rampant sable grasping a covered cup or."

This translation reads: A silver background upon which are charged two black lions, walking, three paws on the ground, the right forepaw being raised, the head looking at the spectator, and the tail curved over the back. Three golden goblets each with a dome-shaped cover are charged upon the black chief. The partition line between the ground and the chief is indented. For the first time, the coat of arms includes a crest. Over the helmet placed above the shield is found the top half of a black lion which is erect, has two paws raised, grasping a covered gold cup. The lion is looking forward and his tail stands erect behind him. See drawing D.

Charles Wetherill, in his Records, English and Colonial of the Wetherill Family, has proved his family's right to bear these arms just described.

Returning to Burke's General Armory, we find under the heading "Wetherall (Co. Lincoln)" a blazon identical to Christopher Wetherill's above, except that the principal charge, the two walking lions, are facing forward, and are described as "in pale" or one walking atop and one below the other. Except for Sir James Wetherall's "lions rampant," all the black lions are positioned in this manner. See drawing E.

The last armorial shield to be described in this chapter belongs to Sir Charles Wetherell, Knight, who was Attorney General in England in 1826, and was a son of the Very Reverend Nathan Wetherell, D.D., Dean of Hereford. His blazon is:

> "Argent two lions passant guardant in pale sable on a chief dancettee of the second three covered cups argent."

No doubt because of his position, he was granted the augmentation by the crown.

His blazon translates into: The tincture of the shield is silver. The principal charge placed upon the shield consists of two black lions walking, one on top and the other below, three paws being raised, the head turned so as to look at the spectator, and the lion's tail curved over the back.

The ordinary, secondary charge, again the familiar chief colored black, is partitioned apart from the shield by a dancettee. Upon this chief are three cups, each with a dome-shaped cover, this time colored silver. The above arms can be found in Burke's General Armory. Curiously, Burke did not include a crest for Sir Charles Wetherell's arms. See drawing F.

Witherell crests

> Fairbairn's Crests catalogs two Witherell crests: "Wetherall, Lincoln, a demi-lion rampant, sable, holding a covered cup, or."

See Christopher Wetherill's coat of arms above (drawing D) for a written description of this crest. The other crest is:

> "Wetherell, the same as Wetherall, a lion's gamb erased, sable, holding up a covered cup, or."

We have here a lion's black forepaw torn off with jagged edges holding up a golden cup with a dome-shaped cover.

Observations about the Witherell coat of arms

It is nearly impossible to determine why a family chose any particular arms. A few casual observations beg to be written, however, about the Witherell arms described above.

The durable black lions, patiently walking down through the centuries, dominate the shield-scape as the principal charge. Some face the reader, others face forward. Two lions, in perhaps the throes of sudden autonomy, even stood "rampant." In passing, it is tempting to say that would it not have been more appropriate for our earliest forebearer to choose as his principal charge--if it was to be an animal--a sheep? For are we not, as shown in Chapter 2, named after the wool-coated little mammal and not the ferocious lion? Can perhaps the lamb turn into a lion?

A later augmentation to the Witherell arms, but no less prominent, are the three golden goblets. They leap out of the black chief like glistening teardrops out of a stormy night. Frank E. Wetherell might have been right on how they were added to the arms. Golden goblets could easily manifest the palatable delights. It is likely, at least, that there was some significant family event that authorized this addition.

Perhaps the key to our completed coat of arms is the crest. What else could a raised goblet mean except to say, "I offer you--the King, Sovereign, Lord, England, or Life--full abundance in all things." Maybe Orville ("Bud") Witherell (no. 1885) and Frank E. Wetherell come close to the real meaning of the Witherell heraldic achievement when they give us the motto supposedly used by the main branch of the family in England,

"Vi et copia"

loosely translated through imperfect knowledge of Latin as

"Life and abundance."

That indeed is worthy to raise a golden cup to!

Coat of arms for Witherells of New England

Before we leave this chapter, we should return to a coat of arms of the New England Witherells. We have none! We have none that can be proved, at least. Unlike the Christopher Wetherill line of Pennsylvania, we have not been able to connect either New England main line to an ancestor in England who was authorized to bear a coat of arms.

It is not our intention to usurp arms rightfully borne by others. On the other hand, there is no governing body in the United States regulating the granting and bearing of coats of arms. There are today efforts underway to correct this situation.

The New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston, Mass. has set up a committee on heraldry. They will register (1) arms which had been brought over by an immigrant or first settler, or (2) arms which had been granted or confirmed by a College of Arms or other heraldic body, or (3) arms which had been used since time immemorial. The petitioner need not claim descent from the original bearer to have the arms accepted. The committee will even go further and assist any person in devising an original heraldic inscription. It is an imperfect system, but at least the society is attempting to bring order and expertise to an increasingly chaotic American interest in coats of arms.

Another organization parallels the New England Historic Genealogical Society's venture. The American College of Arms in Baltimore, Maryland will register, confirm, or grant arms to any seriously interested party and will produce an American armory.

An American coat of arms for the reader

Our interest lies in gaining recognition for the venerable name Wetheral--of whatever spelling. We shall not go into the bond between persons of the variant spellings here; see chapter 2 for such a background. It may be that we do not all have a common ancestor. But without much fear of error, we most likely do have a common link in the origin of our rather unique name. In that it has been used since the introduction of surnames into England, we wish to submit a representative coat of arms commensurate with its long history.

To stay within the bounds of historic authenticity, we return to Burke's General Armory, and submit (see drawing E):

> "Wetherall...ar. two lions pass. in pale sa. on a chief indented of the last three covered cups or. Crest--a demi lion ramp. sa. holding a covered cup or."

A final translation: Upon the silver armorial shield are charged two black lions, one positioned above, and one below, which are walking, three paws on the ground, the right forepaw being raised, the lion's head looking forward, and the tail curved over the back. A black chief is charged upon the upper third of the shield, and is separated from it by an indented partition line. Three gold goblets with dome-shaped covers are then charged on the chief. The crest rests atop a knight's helmet placed just above the escutcheon. Here we find the top half of a black lion, erect, holding another dome-covered, golden cup. The tufted end of the lion's tail trails behind.

This coat of arms sums up most completely the armorial history of the Witherells in England. The lions remain as ever in their frozen prance, though now they face forward--as if they are eternally ready to flirt with the fresh winds blowing toward the New World.

The tincture of the shield stays as it has throughout: silver. The chief ordinary still dominates the upper third of the shield. It has evolved through the ages from red to black, and has added an indented partition, and has been further charged with three gold cups. A helmet has been added, as it was on most ancient arms. Upon this helmet was placed a crest, in historical accord with the shield. One of the prancing lions now stands rampant in family pride, and holds aloft a golden goblet.

We submit this coat of arms to you the reader, and like the black lion, raise a golden cup to you, in hopes of eternal "life and abundance."

CHAPTER 4. THE LIFE OF REV. WILLIAM WITHERELL OF SCITUATE

William Witherell was born, probably in the county of York (Yorkshire),[1] in the northern part of England, about the year 1600. A thorough search of the published parish registers[2] of Yorkshire, however, revealed no mention of him or his birth date, and gave no clues as to the identity of his parents. However, Deane,[3] in his 1831 history of Scituate, Mass., says:

> "There is a tradition here which has been handed down for truth, that his mother was the daughter of John Rogers, the Smithfield martyr."

Rogers' biography is considered in Chapter 6 in some detail. Some genealogists, among them Savage[4] and Drummond[5] doubt this tradition on grounds that John Rogers' martyrdom occurred in 1555, some 45 years before William Witherell's birth. However, this gap could quite possibly have been spanned by two generations rather than one, thus making William a great grandson rather than a grandson of Rogers.

The surname Wetherell (Witherell, Witherill, and other spellings), however, was common at the time throughout the counties or shires of northern England, particularly in Durham, Cumberland, and Yorkshire. The village Wetheral, where the name originated, is located in Cumberland county, about five miles east of Carlisle.

The earliest we read of William Witherell is during adolescence, when he matriculated at the University of Cambridge (Cambridge, England), sizar[6] of Bennet College (later known as Corpus Christi College), in the Easter term, 1619, under the tutorship of Mr. Domelawe. The following is an extract from the Register of Admissions:[7]

	Gulielmus Wetherell Ebor--
1619	acensis. admissus sizator	Iulii 3^{o}
	Tutore. M^{ro} Domelawe

Existing records mention only that he was from Yorkshire, and do not give the name of the town. William must have been from a fairly well-to-do English family, because few youths of that day went to college. Whether he was a student of theology is not known, though we presume this to be so, because he preached in later life. He took the A. B. degree in 1622 (i.e., January, 1623), and spelled his surname "Witherell." In 1626 he took a M. A. degree from the same college, spelling his surname "Wetherell."[8, 9] Several other persons of the Wetherell cognomen are said to have attended Cambridge in the early 1600's, all from Yorkshire, though we know not their relation to William.

After William completed his higher education, he is next heard from in 1627, in the county of Kent, where then being "of Maidstone," he married[10] Miss Mary Fisher at St. Mildred's Cathedral, Canterbury, Kent. His marriage license reads as follows:[11]

> "Witherill, William, M.A. of Maidstone, ba[chellor], about 25, and Mary Fisher of Boughton, Monchelsea, maiden, about 22, who is now under govt. of her mother, Joan Martin, now wife of John Martin,[12] s.p.[13] yeom., who consents. At S. Mildred's Cant. March 26, 1627."

While at Maidstone, William became Master of the Free School, and had three children (which survived)--Samuel (called the eldest in William's will), Daniel ("born at the free-school house in Maidstone, Kent, Old England Novr. 29, 1630"[14]), and Thomas; more will be said of these in the Genealogy Section.

On March 14, 1634, William Witherell obtained a certificate from Samuel Marshall, Mayor of Maidstone (also signed by Thomas Swinnok, Jurat; Edward Duke, Minister; Robert Barrell, Minister) to the effect that he, William Witherell, was in conformity with the orders and discipline of the church, and had taken the oath of allegiance and supremacy. With this document, he, his wife Mary, children Samuel, Daniel and Thomas, and a servant, Anne Richards, secured passage on a vessel called the Hercules of Sandwich, bound for New England.

The exact date of the Hercules' embarkment is not known, but it was probably soon after March 26th, the last date which appears on a certificate issued to a family head[15] who secured passage on the ship. Inasmuch as the Julian calendar was in use in Britain and America until 1752, New Year's Day always fell on March 25th, so it is correct to say that the ship sailed in 1635 rather than in the previous year, as given by some.[16]

The Hercules was "of the burthen of 200 tonnes or thereabouts,"[17] and there were a total of 100 passengers on board plus the Master and presumably a crew. Of the passengers present, 32 were family heads and wives, 47 were children and kinsfolk of the family heads, and 21 were servants, including apprentices. The complete list of passengers is given in the records of Sandwich, County Kent, Yearbooks C and D (1608-1642), and is also available in published form.[18] The list is certified under the seal of the office of the Mayoralty, June 9, 1637.

Description of the Hercules is lacking, except that it was "of the burthen of 200 tonnes or thereabouts," as mentioned above. Baker,[19] an authority on early sailing vessels, states that seventeenth-century English deep sea vessels tended to be of one of three universal types--the pinnace (ca. 15-200 tons), bark (12-100 tons), or ketch (12-70 tons)--whereas those engaged in fishing and domestic commerce generally preserved their national characteristics. Thus, the Hercules, being 200 tons, must have been a pinnace, and a giant of its day; hence its name, after the mythological Greek hero. The pinnace is defined by Baker as:

"A lightly-constructed, single-decked, square-sterned vessel generally fitted with superstructures forward and aft, i.e., forecastle and poop. Pinnaces ranged in size from about 15 to 200 tons and were suitable for light naval duties or as tenders to large exploring or trading ships. Although primarily sailing vessels, pinnaces were also fitted with sweeps for use in calm weather or for moving about harbors. The rigs of pinnaces ranged all the way from the simple spirit main and staysail combination to the full ship rig of the period. Vessels classed as pinnaces were employed by the New England colonists for coastal trading and communications and, to a certain extent, for carrying cargoes and passengers to and from England."

The Master of the vessel was John Witherly. We suppose that he may have been a brother of our William Witherell, not only because of the similarity of surname (the orthography of which was particularly variable in those early years), but also because there was indeed a John Wetherell who was an early resident of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He was in Cambridge (1635, the same year William Witherell resided there), Sudbury (1639), and became a freeman of Watertown (1642). Deane[20] also believed John to be probably a brother of our William Witherell.

The Hercules, with its 100 passengers, arrived at Massachusetts Bay Colony in the summer of 1635, but the exact date of arrival and port of call are unknown, nor whether the ship returned to England, though we presume this to be the case.

We know not the reason or reasons why William and his family came; only that they did indeed come. Their embarkment to New England in early 1635 occurred during a time of great religious upheaval in England, when many (Puritans, Separatists, and Presbyterians) took exception to official Anglican doctrines, for which they were severely persecuted by the dictatorial King Charles I. (r. 1625-49), who ruled by the theory of Divine Right. It was the harsh treatment by William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury (r. 1633-45), however, that drove thousands of Puritans to New England. This also was the time of the Thirty Years' War (1618-48), which was being fought on continental Europe, and which also was in part a religious struggle.

Upon his arrival in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, William settled initially in Charlestown, then bought (By Feb. 8, 1635)[20A] land in Cambridge (then called Newtowne), where he took up residence and probably taught grammar school.[21] On March 17, 1635/6, he sold his house and twelve acres of land on the south side of the Charles River [in what is today part of Boston] to John Beniamin [? Benjamin] of Newtowne [Cambridge].[22] This house later became the property of Edmund Angier.[23]

> On June 3, 1636, the town of Charlestown voted as follows: "Mr. William Witherell was agreed with to keep a school for a twelve-month, to begin the 8th of the 6th month [i.e., Aug. 8, 1636 to Aug. 8, 1637], and to have Ł 40 for this year."[24]

We read further that on February 12, 1637/8, a committee was appointed by the town to settle Mr. Witherell's wages "for the years past in pt. and pt. to come,"[25] This school committee, the first in New England, consisted of Mr. Greene (ruling elder of the church), William Le[a]rned (one of the selectmen), and Ralph Sprague (a prosperous farmer who had been a member of the first board of selectmen). There is no indication that Charlestown Free School had grammar grades until 1666, when Ezekiel Cheever became the master.

William Witherell's presumed nephew, John Fosdick (son of Stephen and Sarah (Wetherell) Fosdick) might well have been one of William's students, probably receiving full advantage of the instruction.[26]

The typical grammar school of seventeenth-century New England consisted of a young male teacher who was qualified to prepare students for college. For the most part, the teacher's job was to give small children a basic education, but any Latin scholars that happened along were welcome. As far as can be ascertained,[27] the only New England towns that had a grammar school during this period were Boston (1636), Cambridge [Newtowne] (1642), Roxbury (1646), Watertown (1651), Charlestown (1636), Dorchester (1639), Salem (1637), Ipswich (1651), New Haven (1637), and Hartford (1643).

A good case can be made in support of William Witherell being the first public school teacher in New England (and probably in America). It is my sincere belief that he justly deserves prominent recognition in the history of American education on that basis. The early town records of Boston indicate that on April 13, 1635, Philemon Pormont, a scrivener or chirographer, was voted schoolmaster.[28] This would seem to indicate that he was little more than a writing instructor of young children. However, there is nothing in the Boston records to show that the Boston vote of 1635 resulted in the opening of a school. It was not until August 12, 1636 that 45 well-to-do Bostonians met and contributed funds "towards the maintenance of a free schoolmaster for the youth with us."[29] However, the town of Boston did not appropriate any public funds for the support of a school until December 2, 1643.[30] Hence, since it was Charlestown that opened her school on August 8, 1636--four days before the richer inhabitants of Boston met to subscribe for a free school (with no proof of when the school was actually opened), William Witherell can truly be acclaimed New England's first public school teacher.

On February 11, 1636/7, William was granted a house plot in Charlestown, had a house (as recorded March 3, 1637), and participated in a division of land April 23, 1638.[31] Budington[32] makes no mention of him as a member of Charlestown's First Church. William sold his house in Charlestown on December 28, 1638,[33] and later that year removed to Duxbury,[34] in Plymouth Colony.

Inasmuch as he purchased a house and 30-acre tract of land there, we presume that he became engaged in farming. Although nominally a "planter," he may have privately instructed some of the youth of that town as well, but probably did not preach, inasmuch as Duxbury already had a pastor, Mr. Partridge. William's house and land were purchased for £24 from Edward Hall on January 24, 1638, and located between the farms of Ralph Partridge and Nicholas Robins[on].[35] In 1639,

> "Thomas Parishe bought of Mr. William Witherell one house & four acres of land to yt, John Bridge south, Abraham Morill west, Gilbert Crackbone east & cowcommon north."

On March 3, 1639/40, William became a freeman of Duxbury,[36] signifying his acceptance by the community, and giving him certain civil and political rights. On April 6 (or August 31), 1640, William Witherell (with Thomas Weyborne) received a 50-acre grant of land from the Plymouth Colony Court, lying "on the northwest side of Northill North Hill" in Duxburrow [Duxbury].[37] Other records show that he had lands in Duxbury at North River and at Namassakeetpit [Namasakeeset] brook, which he later (June 23, 1665) acknowledged having sold to John Rogers, Sr., of Marchfield.[39]

On September 27, 1642, William Wetherell was one of eight persons from Duxbury (along with Capt. Myles Standish, John Alden, Jonathan Brewster, and four others) to investigate trouble with the Indians.[39]

In September, 1644, accompanied by his friend, John Rogers, Sr., of the neighboring town of Marshfield, William Witherell removed his family from Duxbury to Scituate, another town in Plymouth Colony some twelve miles north. Here, as fate would have it, he was to live out the rest of his life. Drummond's biography of John Rogers of Marshfield[40] states that it has been said that this John Rogers was a relative of Witherell, and that there was a tradition that the mother of Mr. Witherell was a daughter of John Rogers the martyr. He states that the inference had therefore been drawn that the father of John Rogers of Marshfield may therefore have been a brother of William's mother. Drummond then voices his doubts regarding this tradition on grounds that "the martyr suffered in 1555, and William Witherell was born in 1600, when the youngest child of the martyr was over 45." It is still possible, however, as stated in the beginning of this chapter, that the link between William and his alleged forebear John Rogers the martyr could have taken another generation, In regard to the possible "relative" relationship between William Witherell and John

Rogers of Marshfield: there was a marriage between their grandchildren, though this did not occur until much later.[41]

Between the time that William Witherell settled in Charlestown in 1635 and the time he removed from Duxbury to Scituate in 1644, four more of his children were born (in addition to Samuel, Daniel, and Thomas, who were born in England). But no records of their birth have been found: Mary, Elizabeth, Theophilus (ca. 1636), and John. However, judging by their dates of marriage (1656, 1657, 1675, and 1673/4, respectively), Mary and Elizabeth, at least, must have been born between 1635-39. William's two later children, Sarah (b. February 10, 1644) and Hannah (b. February 20, 1646) were both born in Scituate.

The circumstances which brought William to Scituate were of a religious nature:

> "In 1644, affairs at Scituate had become ripened for the settlement of a minister of the second Church; and Mr Witherell, being of the moderate party, as it regarded the refusal to commune with members of the Church of England, and also an advocate for [baptism by] infant sprinkling, and withal an educated and a worthy man, was invited to preach, and made himself so acceptable to Mr [William] Vassall and the rest of Mr [Rev. Charles] Chauncy's[42] opponents, that he was ordained pastor September 2, 1645. His ordination had been delayed for some time by the influence of Mr Chauncy and the elders of Plymouth Colony who sided with him, and also by the Church at Duxbury which refused to dismiss him; but at length, by advice of the elders of Massachusetts Bay, the Church proceeded to ordain him in the face of all opposition.[43]

The original Congregational Church in Scituate had been headed by Rev. John Lothrop for five years, but owing to a difference of opinion among his congregation in regard to the proper form of religious worship, half of the congregation followed Lothrop to the town of Barnstable, on Cape Cod, to form a new church, while the other half, headed by Timothy Hatherly, remained in Scituate, and called Charles Chauncy to be their new pastor. The calling of Chauncy, however, was not unanimous, and so a second, more liberal faction, objecting to his views on baptism, headed by William Vassall, split off, and declared they were a church in themselves. The first covenant of this new church (which was variously called Second Church, Second Society, South Society, or Church up the River),[44] had been signed on February 2, 1642, probably in the home of William Vassall, at Belle House Neck. The ordination of William Witherell as pastor, on September 2, 1645, was unquestionably done by "the laying on of hands" of the Ruling Elders (in accordance with the principles of Congregationalism), and perhaps by other church members as well. The seven charter members were: William Vassall, Elder Thomas King, Thomas Lapham, John Twisden, Sara (wife of Elder King), Judith (daughter of William Vassall), and Anna Stockbridge. To these were soon added the families of Hatch, Stockbridge, Torrey, Stetson, Clapp, and Barstow.[45]

At the occasion of William Witherell's ordination, there were some guests or messengers from neighboring churches, but some may have been present to object to, or protest the proceedings, perhaps on advice of Mr. Chauncy, pastor of First Church. Josiah Winslow, Esq., who was later to become Governor of Plymouth Colony, was present as a messenger from the Church of Marshfield, and delivered in writing the following message:[46]

"Marshfield, September 2, 1645.

"The Church at Marshfield advise Mr Vassall and the rest to forbear for a time the ordination till Mr Witherell shall have tendered satisfaction to the Church of Duxbury for his sudden departure."

It is questionable, however, whether Mr. Winslow, a magistrate, approved of the message he brought, because he soon afterward began attending Mr. Witherell's ministry--some ten miles from his residence--and brought his children to be baptized by him. There developed a mutual friendship between Witherell and Winslow, which was to last the rest of their lives.

In answer to the message from the Church of Marshfield, came the following reply:[47]

"Scituate, September 2, 1645.

"Rev. and dearly beloved in our Lord.

"We cannot but with thankfulness acknowledge our engagements to you all, jointly and severally, for your advice, counsel and countenance heretofore, so now in particular, for your assisting us a second tyme, in a further work by our well beloved brother your Church's messenger [Winslow], to whose message unto us concerning our brother Mr Witherell's not walking blamelessly and therefore forbidden by the Apostle to be admitted into office for the present, we answer: that wherein he can be convinced by any present practise, or undeniable precept from the word of God, (the only rule of faith and worship), that what he hath done hath been done repugnant thereunto, he is willing with all readiness to submit, and he hath tendered any satisfaction to the Church of Duckesbury, by the messenger sent unto him, so that he may but hear the call of the great Shepherd. Our honoured and well beloved brother Mr Thomas your fellow member, can confirme you, how submissively he gave them satisfaction to the full, when he was last at Dukesbury, how he desired a dismission from them, waited for it longer than was by some intimated, and after this, again humbly petitioned, and was yet deferred, without any warrant from sacred Scripture, to make him hover in uncertainty. We leave to your judgments to consider of the premises. Though we could say much more, yet if any further light could be reached to our brother from the word of life, we persuade ourselves he will not dare to close his eyes against it. Let it be evidently made manifest fy the word, that our brother is still a member of them, and then both they and you, and all Churches in the Country, to whom he hath by this act given offence, grieved their consciences, and scandalized the gospel, shall have Christian satisfaction. Thus, dearly beloved and affected in the Lord, returning you hearty thanks for your Christian, godly and grave advice to us, and carefulness for us, we take our leave, and commend you to the grace of God in Christ."

by the appointment of the Church

William Vassall, who had originally led the faction that broke away from First Church, returned to England in 1646, never to return. Thereafter, the feud between the First and Second churches continued, but became less bitter. On Christmas Day, 1649, there was a mutual attempt on the part of both churches, at reconciliation. The conference of five delegates from each church was held at the home of Thomas Robinson of Second Church. Representatives of First Church present were Mr. Timothy Hatherly, Mr. Charles Chauncy, Deacon Richard Sealis, Humphrey Turner, and John Woodfield; from Second Church were Mr. William Witherell, Elder William Hatch, Mr. Thomas Robinson, Deacon Joseph Tilden, and John Stockbridge, Accusations and replies were exchanged, but unfortunately nothing more was accomplished.

The first meeting-house of the Second Church, necessarily a small structure, stood "fifty rods east of Stony Cove Brook," on Wilson's Hill, and a cemetery was established near it in 1644. William Witherell either built or purchased a parsonage soon after his move to Scituate, as no provision was made for it by the church. It stood "a few rods southeast of the church," and he resided there for the remainder of his long life.

A minister, being a well respected citizen of his community, was often called upon to witness legal documents. Even before his ordination as pastor, William witnessed the will of Thomas Lapham[48] of Scituate on January 15, 1644, signing the document "William Wetherell." On April 25, 1648, William witnessed the will of James Cushman of Scituate,[49] signing it "William Witherall," and on May 24, 1648, took an oath before Timothy Hatherly that James Cushman signed and sealed his last will and testament. Similarly, on November 5, 1651, William witnessed the will of William Hatch[50] of Scituate (a member of his church who had come with him as a fellow passenger on the ship Hercules), signing the document with a Latinized version of his name, "Guilielmo Wetherell."

In 1652, William Witherell and his followers of Second Church made a second overture at reconciling the differences between the two churches. The following message was delivered:[51]

"Scituate, March 5, 1652.

"To the Church of Christ in Scituate, whereof the Rev. and well beloved Mr. Chauncy is Pastor. Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied, &c. Dearly beloved in our blessed Savior.

"Whereas for a long tyme you have stood at a distance from us, in the point of Communion in holy things of God, we the Church of Christ in Scituate whereof Mr Witherell is Pastor as yet not knowing what the evil in us is that occasions the same, do earnestly entreat you as breathren, in charity you would deal faithfully and plainly with us, in discovering to us what that evil is that you see in us, which yet unto this day occasioneth the distance, so that we may be brought to the right way towards God, and give satisfaction to his people--we, not doubting that you will deal ingenuously with us. commend you to God and the word of his grace."

William Witherell, in the name
Thomas King, and with Thomas Robinson, the consent
James Torrey of the Church.

The answer from First Church came some ten months later:[52]

"Scituate, Jan. 30, 1652.

"To the Rev. and well esteemed Mr William Witherell, with the rest of the Society give these.

"Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied, &c.

"Rev. and Beloved in the Lord.

"It hath been no small grievance of spirit unto us, that there hath been so great and so long a distance between you and us in Communion: and there is much cause for humiliation before the Lord for it: and we do earnestly desire that the Lord would show both you and us a clear way to put an end unto it. But we are, many of us, very much in the dark about it at present: and all that we answer to your letter is this.

"That your motion that we should deal faithfully and plainly with you, in discovering unto you what that evil is that we see in you that occasions the distance, were very equal, if nothing to the purpose had been done by us before: but now seeing after three meetings of the Elders of the Churches, and one of them having the presence of the magistrates, and also another meeting of five messengers chosen by each of our Societies, you do still write unto us that you do not yet know what that evil is in you that occasions the distance, we cannot hope to do more nor yet so much as so many Honored & Reverend persons and such as were thought meet for the purpose, have endeavored to do already, (as it seems) to little effect. Thus desiring you to take in good part this answer of the greater company of our assembly, we commend you to him who is the Aurhor of peace in all the Churches of the Saints."

Yours in the Lord

in the name and
Charles Chauncy, with the consent of the greater part.

The following letter was sent by the Second Church in reply to the above:[53]

"Scituate, July 8, 1653.

"Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied, &c.

"Rev. and well beloved in our blessed Savior.

"You may be pleased to remember that some four months agone, we presented you with a request, which we conceived to be both Christian and pious in the sight of God and man, viz. 'that you would deal faithfully and plainly with us, in discovering to us what that evil is that you see in us, which yet unto this day, occasions that distance in point of communion.' Since which tyme, we received a letter from your Rev. Pastor, subscribed 'in the name and with the consent of the greater part,' wherein you intimate your grievance of spirit, cause of humiliation, and earnest desire, that the Lord would show both us and you, a clear way to put an end to it: for, say you, 'many of us are very much in the dark about it.'

"As for your grievance of spirit, it hath been the like grievance of spirit unto us, though we are not conscious of any cause of that distance between us, and therefore for our part, we do not find any cause of humiliation for it.

"We cannot but admire at your intimation of the unequalness of our motion, not desiring to see our sin which occasions the distance, for if there had been means used, as you say, to convince us of our sin, and we would not be brought to the sight of it, yet notwithstanding, when we do manifest our willingness to be brought to the sight of it, we judge it an equal motion.

"As concerning those meetings of Elders, whereof one had the presence of the Magistrates, which you bring as an argument to prove that there hath been means used to convince us of our sin, we acknowledge one of them, viz. that which had the presence of magistrates, altho' we had no hand in procuring them, neither did they show us any sin; but as for the other two, we are ignorant of what they met about, or of any sin they charged our Church withal. And for the other meeting of five messengers of each Society, which you bring as another argument to prove that there hath been means used, and the unequalness of our motion, you seem hereby to lay a charge of unfaithfulness upon our messengers, who brought us intelligence, that we were cleared of those things which were laid to our charge, and that your messengers also seemed well satisfied; and therefore we desire you to make good that charge against them, that we may so deal with them, that neither you nor we may be guilty of the sin of not reproving our brother. Lev. 19.17.[54]

"And as for that you say in your letter that 'many of you are very much in the dark' concerning the distance between us, we much marvel that you should so long debar us from communion and yet many of you not know wherefore, especially considering that your Rev. Pastor himself hath declared 'that he could freely hold communion with as many of our Church as he knew,' (at our brother Robinson's wedding).

"And whereas you manifest an earnest desire that the Lord would show both us and you a clear way to put an end to the distance, our hearty and earnest desires concur with you; and therefore we do once again, in the bowels of Christ, entreat you to answer our former request, or else to refer the difference betwixt us to some Elders of other Churches mutually chosen. Thus desiring that you will now deal ingenuously and Christainly with us, we commend you to the Lord and rest

"Your brethren in Christ."

William Witherell,
Thomas King, by order of Ephm Kempton, the Church.
Robert Stetson.

In the margin of this letter is written a note in William's handwriting:

"This letter was read in Mr Chauncy's Church July 16, 1653, and the Wednesday following we had lightning and thunder and storms and hailstones flung on our innocent heads, viz. Acts 19, 20[55] in the application of the doctrine."

In the fall of 1654, Rev. Charles Chauncy retired as Pastor of First Church to become President of Harvard College,[56] and was succeeded in Scituate in 1656 by Henry Dunster,[57] who had immediately preceded Chauncy as Head at Harvard. Relations between the First and Second Churches then improved considerably.

On November 20, 1656 [or 1658], William Witherell's daughter Mary married Thomas Oldham, and on December 22, 1657, another of his daughters, Elizabeth, married John Bryant.

According to an anecdote handed down by tradition, this John Bryant was once rebuked in church by Pastor William Witherell, upon entering church after services had begun. Witherell, at the close of his prayer, addressed him, saying:

"Neighbor Bryant, it is to your reproach that you have disturbed the worship by entering late, living as you do within a mile of this place, and especially so, since here is goody Barstow, who has milked seven cows, made a cheese, and walked five miles to the house of God in good season."

This example just mentioned may serve to illustrate the strict Puritanical manner in which William conducted his ministry.

On Aug. 20, 1658, William's first grandchild was born, Mary Oldham. On August 4, 1659, William's son Daniel married Grace Brewster, and removed to New London, Conn., where Daniel was destined to carve out a distinguished career as Judge, Captain, and Town Clerk. In 1659/60, Daniel and Grace had their first child, Hannah, and on Oct. 30, 1660, Thomas Oldham, Jr. was born.

The year 1660 was a turning point for Scituate's First Church, when they ordained a new pastor, Nicholas Baker of Hingham, Mass.

Through the amiable efforts of Rev. Witherell and Rev. Baker, the feud which had existed for so long between their two congregations was completely resolved.

Cotton Mather, a great historian of the colonial period, and contemporary with William Witherell, commends a certain little book of Mr. Witherell's, entitled The Life of John Clap of Scituate. In writing the book, Witherell was assisted by Pastor Nicholas Baker of First Church. Although this book in its entirety is presumably not now extant, an extract of it was published in Mather's great work, Magnalia Christi Americana.[58] The original book was prefaced by Mr. Urian Oakes, President of Harvard College, who takes the occasion to say of John Clap, "He was a young old man, full of grace, though not full of days." John Clap, whose biography is the subject of Witherell's book, was born October 18, 1658, a son of Mr. Thomas Clap. John a Christian, was remarkable for his understanding and his piety; he died upon his approach to manhood. Reprinted here is the extract of the book, as it appeared in Mather's Magnalia:

> "Little more than thirteen years old was John Clap, of Scituate, when he dy'd; but it might very truly be said of him, 'that while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of his father.' From his very infancy he discover'd a singular delight in the holy Scripture, whereby he was made wise unto salvation; and he also made himself yet further amiable by his obedience to his parents, and his courtesie to all his neighbours. As he grew up, he signaliz'd his concern for eternity, not only by his diligent attendance upon both public and private catechising, but also by the like attendance on the ministry of the Word, which he would ponder and apply, and confer about with much discretion of soul, and pray for the good effect thereof upon his own soul. Yea, 'twas even from his childhood observable in him, that ever after he began to speak reasonably, he would both affectionately regard the family prayers, and likewise, both morning and evening, with a most unweary'd constancy, recommend himself by his own prayers unto the mercies of God.
> "Arriving higher in his age, he was very conscientious of his duty, both to God and man; and particularly careful of his father's business, which now became his own calling. At work with his father in the field, he would frequently be propounding of questions, by the answers whereof he might be promoted in the knowledge of God: and at the seasons which others usually employ to vain purposes, he would be abounding in the exercises of devotion. But of all the imitable things to be seen in him, he was exemplary for nothing more than his endeavors in preparation for, and sanctification of, the Lord's day. Yea, his parents have affirmed, that for a year or two before he dy'd, 'they never heard an unprofitable word come out of his mouth;' but he would often bewail the idle, trifling, vain discourses of other people.

"About a year and a half before he died, the good Spirit of God bless'd him with yet a more thorow conviction of his misery by reason of sin, both original and actual; whence, tho' he had been such a pattern of innocency, yet he would aggrevate his own sinfulness with lamentations truly extraordinary. And for his relief against the terrors of God, wherewith he was now distracted, he was brought unto an utter despair of his own righteousness and abilities; but in this condition he came to adore the grace of God, offering a Jesus who is able 'to save unto the uttermost:' in his longings to enjoy the love of God through Jesus, he was like the 'hart panting after the water brooks!'

"The wounds of his spirit were accompanied with a languishing and consuming of his flesh; yet with great patience he endur'd the hand of God, and he follow'd the Lord with prayers, with cries, with tears, for the manifestation of the divine love unto him.

"It was also observ'd and admir'd that when he was abroad at the publick worship in the time of his weakness, he would stand the whole time of the long exercises, and be so affectionately attentive, that one might see every sentence uttered in those exercises make some impression upon him. The best Christians in the place profess'd themselves made asham'd by the fervency of this young disciple! and in days of publick humiliations, or thanksgivings, kept with regard unto the general circumstances of the countrey, he would bear his part with such a sense of the publick troubles or mercies, as argu'd more than a common measure of publick spirit in him.

"The minister of the place visiting him, after sickness had confin'd him, found him in an extreme dejection of soul' his very body shook through his fear lest the day of grace were over with him; yet justifying of God, though he should be forever cast among the damned. But yet his fears were accompany'd with hopes in the all-sufficient merits of the blessed Jesus: in which hopes he continued, using all the means of grace according to his capacity, and lamenting after those whereof he was not capable.

"A month before he dy'd, he kept his bed; the first fortnight whereof he was very comfortless, and yet very patient; abounding all this while in gracious admonitions unto other young people, that they would be concern'd for their own eternal salvation. And you should not now have heard him complain that he wanted health and ease, though he did so; but that he wanted faith, and peace, and Christ; yet expressing a profound submission to the will of God. But in the last fortnight of his life, this poor child of God had his weary soul more comfortably satiated with the assurance of his love, and so seal'd him with his own spirit, that he rejoic'd with joy unspeakable and full of glory. He would often be saying, 'Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none on earth that I desire besides thee: my flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever;' and, 'I know that my Redeemer lives, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth;' and, 'If I live, I shall live unto the Lord; if I die, I shall die unto the Lord; and whether I live or die, I am the Lord's;' and, 'When Christ, who is my life, shall appear, then shall I also appear with him in glory.' He would profess that his communion with the Lord Jesus Christ was inexpressible, and the spectators judg'd his consolations to be as great as could be born in a mortal body. Being now asked, 'Whether the thoughts of dying troubled him or not?' he reply'd, 'No; death has no terrour to me, because Christ has taken away my sin, which is the sting of death.' But being ask'd, 'Whether he was willing to live?' he answer'd, 'I am willing to submit unto the will of God; but if God hath appointed me to life, I desire I may live to his glory.' And being asked, 'Whether God had put out of doubt his interest in a dying, risen Jesus?' he return'd, 'Yes; and God has fully answer'd my desires: I am now going to a thousand times better world.' He told his mother, 'I love you as dearly as my own life; yet I had rather die, and be with Christ.'

"He continu'd six days with his teeth so shut, as that they could not be open'd: and for the first three days and nights he took no sustenance; afterwards, though this bet seldom, he suck'd in between his teeth nothing but a little cold water; in which time, they that laid their ears to his lips could over hear him continually expressing his comfort in God. But just before his death, his teeth were open'd; when he would often say, 'Oh! how precious is the blood of Christ! it is worth more than a thousand worlds!' and often pray, 'Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!' and at last, he gave up himself to God in those words: 'Lord Jesus, receive my spirit!' He desired his mother to turn his face unto the wall; whereupon she said, 'John, dost thou now remember Hezekiah's turning his face unto the wall?' he said, "Yes I do remember it:' and as she turn'd him in her arms, he so quietly breathed his soul into the arms of his blessed Saviour."

January, 1661 brought with it the tragic death of one of William Witherell's own children--his daughter Elizabeth, wife of John Bryant, who was only in her mid twenties, and childless. By 1662, William had two more granddaughters: Mary Wetherell (daughter of Daniel), and Sarah Oldham (baptized Apr. 5, 1662, died young). Other Oldham grandchildren soon followed: Hannah (March 7, 1664/5), and Grace (Feb. 13, 1666/7). On October 7, 1668, Daniel had another daughter, Mary Wetherell. On December 30, 1668, William's daughter Sarah married Israel Hobart, in the neighboring town of Hingham, Mass., and soon afterward had a daughter Sarah and a son Nathan. Israel was a son of the Rev. Peter Hobart of Hingham, who, being a minister, was probably well acquainted with William Witherell. Another grandchild, Isaac Oldham, was born April 9, 1669. On January 26, 1670/1, Daniel Wetherell, Jr. was born (son of Daniel), but died young; and on March 13, 1670/1, a new Sarah Oldham was born.

Beginning in 1665, taxes for religious uses were levied by the town of Scituate and divided among the two churches, probably on the basis of the number of freemen in each parish, or perhaps by some other principle. The following vote is on record:[59]

"The Town voted to mayntayne Mr Baker and Mr Wetherell, by way of rating yearly."

In that particular year, the town raised Ł105, of which Ł60 went to Nicholas Baker and Ł45 to William Witherell. In 1667, the "town ratirs" put the rate at Ł107 s10, of which Ł57 10s was for Baker and Ł50 for Witherell, "payable the one half in corne and the other half in clothing, provisions, or cattle." In June, 1680, a vigorous protest, however, in the form of a petition to the General Court in Plymouth, was sent by John Bailey and 26 others who objected to being rated for the erection and maintenance of a church in which they did not worship. (Both parishes needed a new building.) The Court then set Mill Brook as the boundary between the two parishes, and exempted certain persons from paying the rate.[60]

William Witherell became a freeman of Scituate, along with his eldest son Samuel, on May 29, 1670.[61] Some sources, viz., Winsor[62] and Pope[63] mistakenly give the date as June 1, 1658. That date, however, was the date on which William's nephew, William Witherell of Taunton (no. 7) became a freeman. In 1675, the General Court at Plymouth compiled "The List of the Names of the freemen of the Jurisdiction of New Plymouth Anno Dom 1675."[64] On that list, among other names, appear the following from "Scittuate:" Mr. William Witherell, Samuell Witherell, Theophilus Witherill, and John Witherill (the latter three being sons of William); in addition, William Witherill of Taunton is listed. No others of the cognomen appear.

On March 5, 1671, "Josias Palmer (of Scituate) was fined 10s for saying that 'Mr Witherel's Church was a Church of the Devil.'"[65] Rev. Baker, in the meantime, was also having his troubles; for example, we also find, in 1677:[66]

> "John Rance (of Scituate) for railing on Mr Baker, in saying he is a false prophet, and saying Major Cudworth is a false, hypocritical man, (note: Cudworth was now restored to a place in the government), and saying that Mr Baker had received stolen goods; (note: alluding probably to taxes extracted from some of the Quakers); also for going up and down to entice young persons to come and hear their false teachers, was sentenced to be publickly whipped."

Events in William's family during the last decade of his life were happening at a faster pace. Although this information also appears in the Genealogy Section, it is also included here for the sake of chronology. In 1673/4, William's son John married Hannah Pincen; on December 5, 1674, a granddaughter, Ruth Oldham, was born; and in 1675, William's son Theophilus married (1st) Mary Parker, and (2nd, on November 9th) Lydia Parker, sister of Mary (who had presumably died). In 1676, Rebecca Hobart (a granddaughter) was born, and on January 12, 1677, Mary (or Mercy) Witherell was born, daughter of Theophilus. In 1678, five more grandchildren were born--Nathaniel and Abigail Hobart (twins, b. May 20th), William Witherell (May 25th, son of John), Elizabeth Oldham (baptized August 18th), and Samuel Witherell, Jr. (Oct. 10th, son of Samuel). In 1679, two more granddaughters were born --Lydia Oldham (August 11th), and Elizabeth Witherell (August 22nd, daughter of Theophilus). In 1680, two more grandchildren were born--Hannah Witherell (April 29th, daughter of Samuel), and Jael(l) Hobart (June 26th). That year, on May 26th, one of his grandchildren, Hannah Wetherell (daughter of Daniel) married Adam Picket of New London, Conn. The same year, on November 21st, brought the death of a granddaughter, Mary (or Mercy) Witherell (daughter of Theophilus). In 1681, four more grandchildren were born--Sarah Witherell (daughter of Samuel), Thomas and Ruth Witherell (March 3rd, twin children of John), and Mary Witherell (March 23rd, daughter of Theophilus); also, William's first great grandchild--Adam Picket, Jr., was born, but died soon afterward. On May 16, 1682, Israel Hobart, Jr. was born. In 1683, four more grandchildren were born--Abigail Hobart (January 14th), Joshua Witherell (June 6th, son of Samuel), another Joshua Witherell (July 5th, son of John), and Lidia Witherell (March 14th, daughter of Theophilus); also one of William's grandsons, Thomas Oldham, Jr., married (June 27th) Mercy Sprout; finally, also in 1683, William's eldest son Samuel died.

Owing to the amiable efforts of Nicholas Baker, Pastor of First Church (who passed away in 1678) and William Witherell, Pastor of Second Church, the town of Scituate was very much in favor of uniting the two societies,[67] and in October, 1679, even sent a statement to the General Court in Plymouth to that effect. Plans called for building a meeting-house for a united society near the Stockbridge Pond in the Greenbush area of Scituate. The Court, however, advised against it,[68] "by reason of remote distance of place and other considerations," so the two churches remained separate bodies. Thus, on November 29, 1679, the boundaries of the two parishes were fixed by order of Court, and from that time, each parish levied its own tax for religious uses. In 1680, the second meeting-house of Second Church was built on Timothy Foster's land, in the old churchyard and burying-ground a few rods east of Union Bridge Road.

In his old age, William Witherell continued to preach, but owing to his infirmities, it grew increasingly apparent that an assistant was needed. The manuscript records of the Second Church are in the handwriting of William Witherell until the year 1674, when it appears that arthritis compelled him to use the services of an assistant. The penmanship thereafter is that of Thomas Mighill, who--although he did not come to Scituate until 1680--probably transcribed the records.

Thus, on September 7, 1680, a committee, comprised of Thomas King, Sr., John Bryant, Sr., and Charles Stockbridge were chosen to procure a new minister. The records of Second Church contain the following entries:

> "Voted to allow 60Ł a year for a minister, and 10Ł to our Pastor Mr Witherell.
> "At a meeting of the church Feb. 6, 1681, a committee was chosen to agree with Mr Mighill for his coming and for his transportation, and to get a house for him, so as we do not exceed 60Ł and his firewood. July 3d, 1681, the Church did give the voate that they desired Mr Mighill, to give him a call."[69]

Thomas Mighill had been educated at Harvard, and had also preached for a few years, but declined receiving ordination upon being called to Scituate, preferring instead to assist Mr. Witherell until the latter's decease.

On December 18, 1680, Plymouth Colony lost a great man--Josiah Winslow--who had served as Governor since 1673. The son of the equally prominent Edward Winslow, Josiah (b. Plymouth, ca. 1629, d. Dec. 18, 1680, ae. 51) was the first native-born colonal governor in America. Josiah had succeeded Myles Standish in 1659 as Commander in Chief of Plymouth Colony in 1659, and was a personal friend of William Witherell, having had his children baptized by him. Josiah Winslow's passing came as a tragic loss to William, and became the subject of the following elegy, which William composed at the ripe old age of 80. This masterful poem,[70] which is included here in full, affords ample evidence of William Witherell's scholarly abilities.

Upon the much to be lamented DEATH of the thrice three times Honoured JOSIAH WINSLOW, Esq. late GOVERNOUR, of New Plymouth and CARLO charus, beloved of his Prince.

Within this Sacred Urn doth lie,
The Quintesence of the Colonie;
New England's Phoenix, Plymouth's glory,
Meet subject for a compleat story:
To whom at helm, we yield the praise
Of blissful times, of peacefull dayes;
The Halcyon[71] which controul'd our seas
Of civil storms, and broiles appease.
Would you have me, him to descrie,
Angels must limn him out, not I;
A Sophoclean quill comes short,
His worth and merits to report:
Where Wisdom, Valour, Eloquence,
Were center'd in great Eminence:
Faith, Justice, Patience, every grace
In this frayl clay tent had their place.
For kind behaviour lov'd by all
That knew him, eke both great and small;
Grave, Prudent, Sober and Discreet;
His whole deportment comlie sweet.
Sound in the faith, a life untaint,
So liv'd, so dy'd this noble Saint--
Methinks it cuts me to the heart,
Of such rare gemms to be desert.
He was a walking Christian bright,
Whose life and conversation right,
Adorn'd Christ's Gospel: some men talk
Like Angels--yet like devills walk.
He was not of a Cynick strain,
But cheerful Patriot, dy'd in grain:
To strangers and to neighbours all,
He was a Turtle without gall.

Compassion lodg'd within his breast;
To poore ope' were heart hand and chest.
Hard heartedness and cruelty
Seemed like vile Nero in his eye.
By th' acre he did not survey,
Nor by the pound did any weigh;
According to desert and merit,
They should his smile or frown inherit.
Religion e'er to keep he strove,
(False worship loves the darkest grove)
And civil Justice to dispense
According unto evidence.
On these two pillars founded are,
The firmest States for Peace or War:
Christ was his all, him might he gain,
Far wealthier he than either Spain.
But why do I burn Tapers in the Sun,
Or midst great Cannons, let fly my pot-gun:
His worth transcends the weakness of my quill,
As lofty mounts o'ertop the pismire[72] hill.

The goodliest Cedar which this land e'er bore
Is hewn flat down and level'd with the shore:
Under whose shade and boughs we shelter'd were,
'Cainst storms of outrage, wrongs, oppression, feare.
Blest with good Government, thrice happy we Had we had eyes our happiness to see.
The sweetest Rose that e'er in Plymouth grew
Frost nips--dried up--like to the morning dew,
Yet leaving a sweet scent, mongst great and small,
Perfum'd his name from Carswell[73] to White-Hall;[74]
Whereby great CHARLES enamored of his worth,
Lets the warm glances of his love shine forth
Upon New Plymouth: grac'd with Royal favour,
Let us be Loyal-bound, t'our good behaviour.
Strong were my feares, lest this strange blazing stream,[75]
Would be prognostick of some tragick theme;
Yet what it doth portend I cannot tell,
But here I come to ring the funeral Knell
Of a choice Worthy, and the people call
To come and solemnize the FUNERAL,
Of him, who late was foremost for his worth
Close lock't in Prison, cannot now step forth.

How many dangers hath this gentleman,
In's life escaped, both by Sea and Land!
Fort-fights,[76] Sholes, Quicksands, Quag-mires, Boggs and Sloughs, Enough to plunge an hundred strong team'd Ploughs:
Yet he brake through; but now we see him have

Mir'd and stuck fast in a dry upland grave.
The Pitcher that went oft whole to the well,
Comes home at last, crack'd like a broken shell.
Our Court of Justice sits in Widdowhood:
The Judge arrested--Bails will do no good.
Judges are stayes of States; when such stayes fall,
It bodes the weak'ning of the Judgment Hall. Isaiah iii. 2.[77]

Somewhat above thrice compleat seven years since,
Plymouth hath lost blest Bradford, Winslow, Prince,[78]
Three skillful Pilots, through this Wilderness,
To conduct Pilgrims; all three called t' undress
Upon the top of Pisgah; while we here
Left Pilot-less, do without Compass steer. Deu. xxxiv. 4, 5, 6.[79]

Thrice honored Rulers, Elders, People all,
Come and lament this stately Cedar's fall,
Cut down at's height, full noontide, blest with shine
Of Royal favour, and (no doubt) Divine;
Freighted with tunns of honor. Every man,
At's best estate is altogether vain. Psalm xxxix. 5.[80]

Ye birds of Musick, Lark, Thrust, Turtle,[81] Quaile,
Ye pretty humming birds, and Nightingale,
Your doleful notes sigh over this sad hearse,
Sighs more suit Fun'ralls than a golden verse.
You that have skill in verse, let every Line
You here present, first pickled be in brine.
Had but the Muses heard thou hence wert gone,
T'attend thy hearse, they had left Helicon.
Thrice Royal CHARLES, were he in person here,
Into thy Urn, would drop a sacred tear.
Had I an hundred eyes like Argus, I
Would weep them all purblind, or pump them dry.
I'd rather drink[82] the tears of my old, eyen[83]
For sweet JOSIAH, then quaff muskadine.
Old eyes can shed few tears; but my old heart
More ready is to break, than eyes to smart. Curae
Slight grief have tears, in troops that ready stand leves
To sally forth and but expect command: locuuntur:
But deep ingulphing sorrow strikes men dumb, urgentes
As frosty Winteres do their joints benumb. stupent.
Methinks I see Cape Cod, Manamoit high land, Seneca.
Our Scituate Cliffs, and the Gurnet weeping stand, Trag.
All clad in mourning sable; brinish streames
Venting, to float a gallant ship to th' Thames.
All creatures crowd to fetch so deep a groan,
Able to break an heart of hardest stone,
And all because their dear JOSIAH's gone.

WILLIAM WITHERELL
Octogenarius.

William Witherell wrote other verses as well, and was undoubtedly among the best of the early colonial poets. Deane[86] mentions an elegy by William on Mrs. Sarah, the wife of John Cushing, Esq., which was extent in his day (1831), but the present writer has not seen it. Deane also remarks that all of Witherell's verses he had seen were "vastly superior to those of [Rev. Henry] Dunster, who wrote a little earlier, particularly in point of versification [metrical structure]."

William's long life was now drawing to a close, and on March 29, 1684 he wrote his will. By that date, his sons Samuel and Thomas, and wife Mary (all of whom had accompanied him on the ship from England) had died, as had two of his daughters--Elizabeth and Hannah. The text of the original will, which is still extant,[87] may be seen in Appendix 8, item 28 of this book. In his will, he left to his grandson Samuel Wetherell (son of his late eldest son Samuel) his house, 10 acres of upland, and 8 acres of marsh land, to be possessed at the age of 21. To Joshua Wetherell (another grandson by his son Samuel), he left 10 acres of upland and 2 acres of marsh land, also to be possessed at the age of 21. To Hannah Wetherell (granddaughter by his son Samuel), he gave two cows and a bed. To his sons John and Theophilus Wetherell, he gave his clothes. To Isabell, widow of his son Samuel, he gave the "use and improvement" of the house, orchard, upland and marshland bequeathed to his grandson Samuel, and the 2 acres of marsh bequeathed to his grandson Joshua, until they came of age; also the rest of his estate; and names Isabell his executrix. To his daughter Mary Oldham, as an afterthought at the bottom of his will, he gave 4 pounds. His son Daniel Wetherell and daughter Sarah Hobart were left out of his will, since they had their portions already."

Recapping his life, William Witherell had been born in Old England, but lived most of his life in New England. He had been fortunate enough to receive a good education, and not only taught grammar school in England, but continued his profession in America, having had the honor and distinction of serving as New England's first public school teacher. Later, as a minister, he inspired his congregation to keep the faith. He helped to bring about a harmonious reconciliation between the two churches in Scituate, and lived to see a new and "more commodious" meeting-house erected by his parish. His ministry lasted for nearly 30 years, during which time he baptized a total of 608 persons into Christianity. Although too lengthy to print here, the list of persons he baptized has been published,[88] and includes the children of persons from neighboring towns--probably because their own ministers were conservative, being opposed to infant sprinkling. Among those he baptized were the families of Rogers of Marshfield, and Nathaniel and Josiah Winslow (the Governor), and Kenelm Winslow (brother of Gov. Edward Winslow), from Yarmouth.

Death finally came to Rev. William Witherell on April 9, 1684, at the age of 84, only 11 days after he wrote his will. Presumably, his successor to the pulpit, Mr. Thomas Mighill, officiated at the funeral. This sad occasion must have been well attended by the parishioners of Second Church, as well as by William's surviving children, sons-in-law, daughters-in-law, numerous grandchildren, and friends. It is quite likely that some of his poetry was read during the funeral.

The inventory of his estate[89] amounted to 165 pounds, 7 shillings. His will was proved in Court at Plymouth, June 4, 1684, only 56 days after his death. For his day, the size of his estate was quite large.

William Witherell was buried in the old burying ground near the meeting house of the Second Congregational Society in Scituate, where the earliest generations of some of his parishioners--the Cushings, Kings, Torreys, Hatches, and Robinsons--were also buried. This small, ancient cemetery is located within a stone enclosure on the south side of the road from the center of Norwell to the Greenbush area of Scituate (on the Norwell side of the town line) between Cross Hill Street and Stony Brook. Your author visited the site on August 28, 1968. For any who may be interested in visiting the site,[90] it should be mentioned here that there is at present, unfortunately, no grave stone to mark the final resting place of Rev. William Witherell, the first pastor. However, a memorial boulder was placed on or near the site of the first meeting-house of Second Church in 1917, on the occasion of the 275th anniversary of its founding.[91]

May he rest in peace.

The end.

Annals of the Fosdick Family. N. Y.), the possibility of her being named after Sara Croft can be ruled out, because William's supposed sister was born ca. 1589.

73 Carswell or Carsrull was the name of Gov. Winslow's seat in Marshfield, so-called from a castle of his ancestors in England.

74 White-Hall or Whitehall was a former palace in London; hence, figuratively, the British imperial government.

75 The comet which, our venerable author seems half inclined to believe, was sent to foretell Gov. Winslow's death, was the Great Comet of 1680, whose tail extended more than 60 degrees, i.e., across more than 1/3 of the hemisphere. It makes its revolution every 575 years, and thus will not again appear until the year 2255.

76 "The Naraganset Fort fight" is meant, in which Winslow served as General of the combined forces of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies. 90 For a map, see: Torrey, Frederic C. 1924. The Torrey Families and Their Children in America. Lakehurst, N. J., Vol. 1, point 9 on map. There is another old burying ground in Scituate, called the Men of Kent Cemetery, on Meeting House Lane. This was used by the First Church, and has a memorial plaque honoring its first pastors--Lothrop, Chauncy, Dunster, and Baker. William Witherell, although being "of Kent," however, is definitely not buried there.

91 The second meeting-house (built in 1680), however, was at a site further west. The site of the first meeting-house later became a mowing field, and the half-dozen stones remaining when the site was desecrated were rediscovered in the late 1800's in a rubbish heap in an adjoining wood lot. Whether William's stone was among them is not known.

CHAPTER 5. WILLIAM WITHERELL OF TAUNTON...AN EARLY COLONY LIFE

Taunton's earliest beginnings

A day's walk over Indian paths from these sandy shores, mother of six other modern-day towns, [1] nestled on the western reaches of the Old Colony, and along the Indian-named Tetiquet River lies ancient Taunton.

Edward Winslow and Stephen Hopkins, in July, 1621, were the first known white men to pass through what later became Taunton. They were emissaries from the Pilgrims at Plymouth on a visit to Massasoit, sachem (chief) of the Wampanoag Indians, at his village then near the present day Warren, Rhode Island. Their path forded Tetiquet (Taunton) River near the present day E. Taunton, bent, with the river, northwest, through what is today the center of Taunton, then pursued south toward the river's mouth and toward the stately chief.

Taunton, as Winslow and Hopkins saw it, was then deserted. A great plague had decimated the Indians from Maine to the Narragansett Bay in 1617-18, completely destroying some tribes. Although tragic, this was fortunate for the Pilgrims at Plymouth, where the local Patuxet tribe was completely eradicated, except for the Pilgrims' friend Squanto. It was also fortunate for Taunton.

Recently, however, before the killing plague, the area had been thickly populated. On either side of the twisting Taunton, and for a distance inland, the land had been cleared by the doomed inhabitants, probably the Tetiquet and Namasket tribes.

Into the still and waiting wilderness came its first white settler, a doughty woman, Elizabeth Poole. Crowded out of Dorchester, where she first landed, near Boston, she soon--like later immigrants for the next two centuries, searched for virgin, unspoiled lands to settle. Massachusetts Bay Colony's Governor Jonathan Winthrop, in his journal of 1637, writes, "this year a plantation was begun at Tecticutt, by a gentlewoman, an ancient maid, one Mrs. Poole. She want late thither and endured much hardship and lost much cattle."[2]

She bought the so-called Tetiquet Purchase from the Indians, and soon other settlers, mainly from Dorchester, followed her path southward. In a document signed by Richard Williams, Walter Deane, John Hall, and others, and presented to a Taunton town meeting in 1680, they state, "Whereas, by the Providence of God, in the year 1638 and the year 1639, it pleased God to bring the most part of the first purchasers of Taunton over the great ocean into this wilderness from our dear and native land and after some small time here we found this place called by the natives the land Cohannet..."[3]

Cohannet was bought by a corporation of 46 original purchasers or proprietors. When it was bought from Massasoit, who claimed title, is not known; the original deed has been lost. But a confirmatory deed[4] from Philip, Massasoit's son, is extant and dates the purchase at 1638. These 46 original purchasers principally, and Mrs. Poole in particular, came via Dorchester from the southwestern counties of England, viz. Somerset, Devon, Dorset, and Gloucester. Many of them, not incidentally, knew one another.

The Cohannet Purchase lay alongside the western edge of Mrs. Poole's Tetiquet Purchase, and shortly after settlement, Cohannet was named in honor of that sister city the settlers knew so well in England, Taunton.[5]

A visitor in 1660 described it as "a pleasant place, seated among the windings and turnings of a handsome river, and hath good conveyances to Boston by cart"[6] by the Bay Road. No doubt the area had been surveyed before the settlers came, and their report must have been favorable. Cleared land, flat, save for nearby Prospect Hill, scattered ponds and lakes dotting the green pine forests with blue, and especially the rivers delighted the adventurers. Taunton River was wide and navigable. Small boats and rafts were soon carrying hay, timber, and livestock upon its gentle waves. But equally as important to the proprietors was Mill River.

Rivers were vital to early settlements as a source of both power and food. Mill River, flowing out of the north, especially with its rapids, proved ideal for the power-hungry and vital grist and saw mill industries. Moreover, every spring the rivers virtually exploded with herring or alewives, long prized by the Indians as food and important fertilizer for their corn crop. The settlers, likewise, quickly learned their value. Soon, on the bountiful Mill River, near the falls and where it empties into Taunton River, a grist and saw mill were built. At this juncture, born of the sustenance of two river, and along the banks of each, the eager settlers created their town.

Just above the rivers' juncture, the colonists rapidly completed their meeting house, used both as a meeting place and house of worship. Nearby, a town common was set aside. Then each original proprietor was given a home lot of from five to fifteen acres, stretching north and to the east of the common, on which to build his crude dwelling and to begin his first crops.

By December 4, 1638, the town must have been settled, for, according to the Plymouth records,[7] "John Strong is sworne constable of Cohannet until June next." On March 5, 1639, the same records state "that Captaine Poole shall exercise the inhabitants of Cohannet in their armes."

Then, finally, on June 19, 1640, the Plymouth General Court sent John Brown, an original proprietor of Taunton, and Myles Standish, that diminutive but wily Pilgrim Indian fighter, to lay out the 8 mile square Cohannet Purchase. At the first Plymouth Colony General Court, held at Plymouth, 25 miles to the east, on June 4, 1639, Cohannet was represented, along with Plymouth, Duxborrow [Duxbury], Scituate, Sandwich, Yarmouth, and Barnstable. These 7 infants were then the only towns yet born in the Colony of New Plymouth. Cohannet, alone amongst the seven, thrived inland, away from the bountiful shore, but was nurtured heartily by her cherished rivers.

Arrival of William Witherell

A few years earlier, forever washed from recorded history, a sailing ship not unlike the Pilgrim's Mayflower might[9] have navigated around the dangerous Cape Cod shoals, past Martha's Vineyard and Elizabeth Islands, and sought out Mount Hope Bay and the mouth of Taunton River.

What would Captain William Dunn have seen in his unnamed and unknown vessel, if he had indeed sailed up the Taunton, ca. 1640? There were but few Indians, only the Wampanoags at Mt. Hope. Beyond, the river banks were cleared and still as far as his ship's draught would take him. He might have seen the river thick with shad and herring, and in the distance, at a sharp bend in the narrowing water, a good spot for a settlement--deserted, cleared, and timelessly waiting.

And what of his cabin boy? Youthful eyes growing bright at the sight of nature offering her treasures for whomever might accept. Thoughts ringing with adventure and unlimited possibilities. It's conjecture, to be sure, but Capt. William Dunn's cabin boy,[10] William Witherell, might just have seen his future home first from a ship's deck upon the Taunton.

William Dunn was one of the original 46 proprietors of the Cohannet Purchase. Where he came from, what ship he sailed, and where he disappeared to is not known. But he must have had some connection to the original 46. Perhaps he brought some of the settlers over on his vessel. Perhaps he was related to one of them; that he might have been related to William Witherell would not be idle conjecture.

It is known, however, that he soon sailed back to England with the understanding that if he did not return to claim his purchase right that it would escheat to young William Witherell. Dunn did not return, and his cabin boy eventually claimed the right.

Where young William Witherell came from, unfortunately, is not--and probably never will be--known, either. He could have come from the southwest jut of England, like many other Taunton pioneers, or from near London, where many New England-bound ships set sail; more likely his origins lay darkly upon the moors and moist rolling hills of northern England--Yorkshire, Durham, and Cumberland counties--whence, it's believed, his presumed uncle, the Reverend William Witherell (no. 5), and Sarah (Witherell) Fosdick (no. 2) and her brother John Witherell (no. 3) began their trek to the new world.[11] And it could be that our youth, in some unfathomable past, had root traces to the village by the River Eden, near Carlisle, and snug against the Scottish border, the village Wetheral.

But the fresh faced William had little time for the past when there was a world to conquer. He perhaps made a few more voyages as cabin boy for Captain Dunn, then, as New England sailing boys would do for generations to come, stowed early the untamed rolling sea for the dark earth, fragrant vegetation, and mundane waters of streams, ponds, and swamps. His heart, though, even when land locked, enticed him, like ceaseless waves, ever to water's edge.

The young, new immigrant

As a young lad in an infant village, he boarded with another family, probably one he knew in the old world. This tight Puritan society even passed legislation outlawing single people living alone; they were not to set up their own separate homestead until "safely" married. There was, along the edge of a still hostile frontier, and within a righteous social structure, no room for frivolous single men.

William was soon familiar with this serious business of pioneer life. The first official record of our adventurer appears on Captain Poole's list of Taunton's Train Band of Militia, which included "all the males able to beare armes from XVI [16] years old to 60 years."[12] Each of these militiamen, in time, besides acquainting himself with military orders and marching upon the green, had to provide himself with "a musket, a sword or cutlass, bandolier and knapsack and an initial supply of powder, bullets and match."[13] William was one of 54 on the Taunton military list, dated 1643.

The year 1643 was a landmark for New England. The immigration floodtide, especially in Massachusetts Bay to the north, had ceased, and had even begun to slightly ebb toward England, due to the founding of the Commonwealth. Captain Dunn might have returned to the mother country for just this reason. And a seed was planted that would blossom into full flower in the yet distant English Revolution. Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, New Haven, and New Plymouth colonies formed a confederation proclaimed the United Colonies of New England. The commissioners were to meet each year in alternating capitols.

A confederation, among other attributes, afforded security and protection of a united front against the weakened, but still threatening, Indians. Indeed, William's youth must have been given maturity by a scare with the feared Narraganset tribe in central Rhode Island in 1644. Taunton itself was exempted from raising soldiers for the never materialized expedition, "from being on the frontier." But, being on the front line of Plymouth's defense, a "militarie guard" was established night and day in the village until the threat passed.

How old our young soldier was at that time is not known. The only age-fix available is that he had to be at least 16 when the Train Band list of males between 16 and 60 was drawn up in 1643. (He is listed as "Wm. Wetherrell.") Before settling at Taunton, he was a cabin boy on Dunn's vessel, so must have been a "boy" shortly before abandoning ship. He does not appear on any other official record until his oath of fidelity in June, 1657. This lends credence to the assumption that he boarded out during his first few years ashore, and was preoccupied, as most new town settlers were, with surviving--building, clearing land for farming and raising crops, tending cattle, fishing, hunting, training with the militia, and absorbing the Herculean task of a young boy experiencing a revolutionary environment on the edge of an unknown continent. There was no time for any other adventures.

So it's assumed in this story that William was sixteen in 1643. At the most it's doubtful that he was more than eighteen in that year, considering what we know of his later history. So, if only for the exigencies of a story, our intrepid Englishman was sixteen in 1643, and toiled away his teens and early twenties quietly, but assiduously, fixing his roots in the New World.

Marriage, family, and home life

During this period, a young village maid caught his eye. She was from a family he had grown to know in his developing manhood. While busily asserting his masculinity in the town--building houses, working long hours in the fields, marching with the militia, socializing with those he accepted into his world--his head was turned more than once by the eloquent glances of a colorfully full-skirted, pretty, young pioneer. His heart having been scorched, he had to nevertheless pursue his courtship formally. But the town considered him by now a solid Tauntonian, and fit for marriage. First, however, having become inseparable, but being New England pragmatists, they made a verbal agreement that she would be taken care of in widowhood by their yet unborn children. So, in about the year 1650, William and Dorothy formalized their bond in a civil ceremony. Dorothy's surname is not known, but she must have been the daughter of an early settler. William, now twenty-three, had been in Taunton at least seven years.

This New World bond produced at least four children. William Jr. must have been born about 1651 or 1652 because he was old enough in 1672 to be included with his father in the Taunton

South Purchase. He would have been 20 or 21 at the time. The next child was probably Dorothy, named for her mother. She first married Elias Irish in 1674, then after he died, married William Wood in 1686. Arbitrarily setting twenty as the age of her first marriage would place her birth at 1654. No doubt Ephraim was the next child to survive the harsh New England climate. It's assumed that he lived at least to maturity, because his father deeded a parcel of land to him. But he didn't survive long, because his father's will of 1691 states he was by then deceased. Other children, as was the disheartening fact of life in the 17th and 18th centuries, may have been born, but never survived childhood; for the next birth--and the only one recorded--was John in 1664, twelve or thirteen years after the first born.

All Witherell descendants of the cabin boy William Witherell of Taunton therefore trace their lines from either William, born 1651 or 1652, or John, born 1664. It appears Ephraim never married, or at least never had any issue. There is no record that Dorothy had any issue from her two marriages. From this original stock, the Witherells soon, and for the next three centuries, heavily populated the woody western reaches of Plymouth Colony. The other main line, descended from the Reverend William Witherell of Scituate, covered the eastern shore of the colony and Cape Cod with their namesakes.[14]

Where the descendants of William of Taunton prospered in the early years was upon a five acre "home-lotte" the town granted William and Dorothy, his bride, by that fruitful tributary, Mill River. They spent the next seven years obscure from recorded history. It was there, though, that they quietly raised their young, and grew together.

The exact location of the "home-lotte" is not known. Many of the town records were destroyed in a disasterous fire in 1838. The records of William's first lot probably disappeared then. But it was not too far up from the confluence of the Taunton and Mill Rivers. At this juncture, and just up Mill River, the settlers built their Meeting House, garrison house, and grist mill, and also set aside the town burial plot and training field. The family began indeed at the center of town.

His land not granted until 1650, he built his first home upstream from the earlier purchasers. As was the custom in mid-century Plymouth Colony, he probably constructed his two-story farm house of oak or pine, with split cedar clapboards inside and out. The clapboards were unpainted, but were soon weathered dark by the rugged weather. Inside, the floors were covered by wide pine planking, rubbed smooth with nearby sand. Small, leaded glass panes were set in the windows, and the structure was topped--not by the thatched roofs of the Pilgrims' first years--but by boards or palings.

Inside the first Witherell house, William laid up two huge fireplaces of stone laid in clay, which warmed the kitchen and living room. An oak or pine table dominated the living room, and a smaller one was placed in the kitchen. But there were few chairs to be seen, only stools and benches. In the kitchen, of course, were a clutter of kettles, pots, and skillets to cook upon over the roaring fire and blistering coals. If William was foresighted, he built a baking oven into the sides of the kitchen fireplace. Up a small stairway were found two sleeping chambers, each with a small fireplace. William and Dorothy slept in a deeply soft feather bed, but the children made do with a linen bag stuffed with rags and remnants. It was spare and rustic, to be sure, but it was home.

Dotting the outside yard were a clutter of buildings, fenced-in yards, and farm life debris. Behind the house, Dorothy had her small vegetable garden, and beyond, near the river, lay Williams corn and wheat fields. A short walk from the home stood the barn, and in between, toward the fields, William built various lean-to's, fenced-in pig pens, cow yards, orchards, and whatever else our erstwhile farmer chose to try his gnarled hands and sweaty brow at.

His days were never ending. William, now in his mid-twenties, woke at dawn and dressed in the outfit of the day: a long-sleeved linen shirt of white, blue, brown, or orange, full-cut leather or wool breeches fastened below the knee, knitted woolen stockings, brown or black leather boots, and a wool or deerskin jacket. This uniform changed little from season to season.

Downstairs, the huge fireplace raging, the family assembled at the table to a breakfast of hasty pudding[15] with molasses or milk served on pewter or wooden trenches.[16] Coffee and tea were then unknown, so they drank cider, a Plymouth Colony favorite. He then went about his morning chores: leading the cows to their woody pastures, toiling in the fields sown with wheat, rye, some barley and oats, field peas and beans, and expecially planted thick with corn. Perhaps he would tend his orchards, which grew well in Plymouth Colony, especially the apple orchards.

Dorothy, in the meantime, would tend to her little garden of peas, turnips, onions, squash, and carrots behind the house. When the sun reached high in the sky, she would return to the kitchen and prepare the noon lunch, consisting of more hasty pudding, salted fish or meat, or perhaps a stew simmered in a big pot over the morning coals. The meal was eaten with spoons, knives, and fingers, for forks were little used then.

In the afternoon, William, never far from the water, went fishing in nearby Mill River. Later he would go hunting, and then return to the fields as the sun sank below the pine-dotted horizon, then leading the cows back to the barn. Dorothy, and later with little Dorothy beside her, spent the afternoon churning the morning milk into butter, spinning or weaving, and preparing the evening meal.

Dinner might be a pot of baked beans with pork, eaten with "rye or injun bread" finished off with a hearty Puritan mug of beer, often made from the omnipresent corn.

After dark, William lit a tallow candle, touched a hot coal to his clay pipe, and "drank tobacco," enjoyed the growing children, fixed the family's accounts, and perhaps entertained visitors for tales and gossip. The long day ended with William reading a passage from the Bible, before they sank exhausted into their feather bed.

The winter routine differed, but was likewise hectic. The wheat, stored in the barn, had to be threshed. Farm equipment had to be repaired, and manure spread upon the fields. And up to fifteen cord of fireplace wood had to be felled and stacked for the freezing and damp winters.

Life in Plymouth Colony

Four Pilgrim stalwarts, who continued as colony leaders, died during these quiet but busy seasons. Edward Winslow, who hiked his way through Cohannet in 1621, passed the colony's scene in 1655. William Brewster, called Elder Brewster, long the colony's religious leader, also died in 1655. Myles Standish of Duxbury, the colony's military leader since its inception, and who helped bound the Tetiquet and Cohannet Purchases, expired in 1656 at 72. Finally, William Bradford, long the colony's distinguished governor, died in 1657. And not incidentally, Massasoit, sachem of the Wamponoags, who befriended these Pilgrim leaders and kept the peace for forty years, although never giving up his Indian ways, went to his grave at the end of the decade, 1660. The passing of these pioneers indicated the fading of Plymouth Colony as a singularly historic entity.

Plymouth Colony, with sandy, barely fertile soil, poor ports, and having no natural resources or great rivers, soon depended on Massachusetts Bay Colony to the north, peopled by more aggressive merchants and traders, for its meager economic gain. And the Colony's leaders, lacking the vision of the first generation just passed, and being by nature conservative, soon deferred to, and were dominated by the confident, even haughty statesmen from Boston. As the colony subsided into conservation and the struggle for economic survival, its people were likewise affected. It existed economically only because it could sell farm products to the bustling Boston market. Much of the commerce went by sail from the coast, but Taunton sent its barter the 25 miles overland by the Bay Road.

William Witherell, no doubt his farm now producing a surplus, took advantage of this market. Driving his overflowing oxcart or head of cattle over the Bay Road, he might have paused six miles north of Taunton, where the rough path bent close by the shores of a shimmering blue pond. Letting his cattle drink deep and rest, he would have noticed the water's long reach across toward the west, the birds flocking on the shores and nearby swamp, and the high firm ground, probably cleared previously by the Indians, just up from the eastern shoreline. This idyllic pond in the yet unsettled frontier was called by the Indians Winneconnet, "a beautiful place for black geese." Resting by the banks of the Winneconnet, the sky high and blue, and the low terrain quiet save for the lapping pond, William mused about his future and the future of his new world.

By now, the colony had about 3,000 to 4,000 inhabitants.[18] There was an economic reason to exist, if not to really prosper, with the Massachusetts trade. The old colony leaders were gone from the scene, William Bradford having died in May of 1657. The prospects for change and a new era of the colonies' history were now awakening. William now had a wife, growing children, and a home lot producing enough to trade with Boston. It was time, William thought, a spell cast by the ceaseless dancing of the Winneconnet's surface, to enter a new era of his own.

So in June, 1657, a month after Bradford died, William took his oath of fidelity to the colony. A year later his neighbors in Taunton, following colony procedure, voted that he was a reputable and reliable citizen of their town, and sent their recommendations to Plymouth. Accordingly, the General Court of the colony accepted him as a "freeman" in June, 1658. The colony was a state of "freemen." Only freemen could vote and hold office. Yet freemen were never a complete majority of the colony. In 1643 there were 233 freemen but 634 males between 16 and 60. In 1675 there were 400 freemen but between 800 and 900 heads of families. Many did not want the burden of voting, meetings, and holding office added to their already arduous life. William welcomed the opportunity.

Already, in 1658, he was selected to serve as a grand juryman from Taunton at Plymouth. Not his first trip to Plymouth, 25 miles to the east over swamp and stream and lowland, it would not by any means be his last. He returned again and again, by foot or by horse, over the next thirty years.

What William saw at Plymouth startled him. After having succored the Pilgrims in their trying early years, Plymouth was now a troubled capitol. Its harbor was dangerous to navigate, and not deep enough for commercial vessels. The land up from the harbor was not as fertile as lands to the north and elsewhere, and soon many of her finest citizens left for Duxbury and other colony towns. There even was an aborted attempt to move the capitol to Cape Cod. Regardless of her shortcomings as a physical city, she did remain the spiritual crown of the colony, and thus likewise continued as the political capitol to the end. William now began to take his place in its official life.

Back in Taunton, William's name soon appeared on a land division list dated Dec. 28, 1659. By this date, Taunton had grown from 64 to nearly 150 square miles--or 100,000 acres--of land. In the division list, William, only recently a landowner, was to be given credit for 28 more acres. The division, rated by "two acres to the head, two acres to the shilling (estate value), and two acres to the lot," ranged from 6 to 96 acres, with two inhabitants not receiving any. Of the 47 persons to be given land, only 13 were to receive fewer acres than William. Of the 47, only 14 had, at the time, smaller estates. Assuming that William Witherell only received his home lot after marriage, he had had merely nine years to accumulate an estate. In a sluggish economy, that was not much time.

Of more interest, perhaps, the list credits William with five persons in the family. We can readily assume these were William, his wife Dorothy, and the three offspring, William, Dorothy, and Ephraim.

In a later list, completed in 1678, there were then seventy-three purchasers or proprietors. According to this record, William had a claim to a purchase right, probably given to him when he married, and had by then claimed the rights inherited from one of the original proprietors, his mentor, Captain William Dunn.

But back in the early 1660's, William, now in his thirties, was still living on his original lot along Mill River. He had little William, now eleven, to help him as best his little hand could. He was deep into the seasons that drifted from spring plantings to hot late summer harvest, and on into the windy, colorful fall, and freezing white winters, his life prospering through these cycles. William now took his first step into official office.

At the annual town meeting in the spring of 1662, the town chose William Witherell as its sole town constable. Today this office still exists in some small remote New England villages, but it is an obscure position with few responsibilities. In early colonial days, however, it was an office of respect and great responsibility, representing the local civil government in matters of law enforcement. Only the most trusted and responsible members of a community were then chosen for this position. Often, men chosen declined to serve because of the responsibility and time it took from their home labors. Considering that in 1662 there occurred an eighty day drought--one of the century's longest --the position must have laid heavily on William. Farming, William's livelihood, was not only time-consuming, it was a necessity.

That William chose to be constable as his first office cannot be ignored. It revealed a character trait bent on martial pursuits that would follow him throughout his colonial existence.

King Charles II of England, in 1664, sent over a group of Royal Commissioners to look at the New England colonies. In their report, they illustrated Plymouth Colony as "containing 12 small towns, one saw mill for boards, one bloomery for iron, neither good river nor good harbor, nor any place of strength.[19]"

Commenting on the character of New Plimouth, the Commissioners stated that there is "a confidence in the local government of this little jurisdiction which has never been yielded to any government before or since, and clearly indicates the high moral culture and pure disinterestedness of all the inhabitants, who had not yet begun to deteriorate from that high and virtuous character for which the founders of the colony were so much distinguished."[20]

William, long an inhabitant of this colony, could not always keep his disinterestedness so pure. Mill River, by which William built his home lot, was a prime resource of the town. It provided power for the mills, and fish for the table and field. Before the town was settled, and afterward, Indians from Mt. Hope and elsewhere would come every April, pitch their tents by the falls, and with much shouting and dancing, catch sufficient prized herring to last throughout the next year as food and fertilizer. These herring (or ale-wives) were a prime reason for the English settling near the Mill River falls, and so the protection of this resource was intimately vital to the town.

James Walker built his saw mill upstream on Mill River in 1664. The town, to protect her interest, voted on January 2, 1664, "that the fish shall have a convenient passage up and down Mill River."[21]

Spring came with a rush! The herring thrashed and beat their way upstream toward their spawning ground. But what the town had feared came to pass. The fish couldn't get past the saw mill dam. As a descendant of an early settler wrote, "It was difficult to persuade the aggrieved people to forbear using violence to open a passage for ye fish and to keep in the path of law for yr reliefe."[22]

They didn't. William, living on Mill River, caught ale-wives by the barrelfull each spring. Protecting his interests, in spite of being constable, the town's law enforcement officer, only two years past, he decided to take the law into his own hands. Still young and aggressive, his immediate instinct was action.

On a wind-chilled night early that spring, the full moon high overhead glancing off the sinking snow, William, his friend Gyles Gilbert, and some other defiant men stalked up Mill River to Walker's saw mill. Impetuous to a fault, they sprang into the mill without hesitation, and tore the mill apart with much shouting and clatter. When they were done, panting, hearts racing fast, the mill was so damaged that Walker would need some time to get it operating again.[23] William was satisfied. He got his point across.

But Plymouth Colony was a state of laws. By April 7, 1664, the General Court had caught up to this deed. William was fined, "The condition of the abovesaid obligation is, that if William Witherell bee of good behavior towards our sou lord the Kinge and all his leich people, and especially to keep from libelling, and appear att the General [Court] to be holden at Plymouth the first tuesday in June next"[24] no further action would take place.

On June 6, 1664, William and three others appeared before the court and were fined "twenty shillings for an abuse done to a sawmill att Taunton, belonging to James Walker and others, by coming in the night and breaking down some parts of the said mill, and for takeing away sevverall things from the same."[25]

The scales of justice also fell on the mill's owner. The court directed "an order to the constable of Taunton to require him to signify unto the said James Walker that hee speedily take course that a free passage bee left for the goeing up of the alewives in the said river whiles yett some pte of the season remaines of their goeing upp."[26]

So this herring-town by the Taunton had protected the riches of its other river; their quick step outside the law revealed their passion and did soon bring "relief."

After this burst of violence, William quietly returned to his farming. New responsibilities joyfully blessed him in 1664 with the birth of another son, John (no. 20). Now he had to busy himself anew with the immediate cares of his growing family. His three oldest were now 13, 11 and 9. They could be of some help around the farm, but he now had another mouth to feed. So William passed quickly, quietly, and routinely into his early forties. Historically, it would be his most active decade. As if to presage the burst to come, the Witherells made their most dramatic move as a family.

The move to Winneconnet Pond

Civilization continued to flow up Mill River. On March 8, 1669, William Witherell put his signature as a witness to a contract between Lt. George Macey and James Leonard. James Leonard--the Leonard family built the first iron forge in the New World--leased ten acres of Macey's land along Mill River so he could build a dam for a new iron works. William also owned land near the new iron works. To much was too much, however. He had had enough of saw mills upstream blocking the herring, and now an ironworks! They wouldn't leave his river alone. So on April 29, 1669, William threw up his hands and sold several parcels of land on and near Mill River, including "five accres, more or less, which was granted to him by the town for a home-lotte."[27] This sale was planned far in advance, for on the same day, about 60 acres, in four lots, were laid out to him on the easterly and northerly shores of that stunning blue lake he had passed so often while following the old Bay Path to Boston, Winneconnet Pond.

Winneconnet Pond lay serenely about seven twisting miles NNW of Taunton Green, over the Massachusetts Bay Path and through dense pine forests and low swampland.

He completed his rough plank home[28] about 20 rods north of the pond's outlet on the easterly side of the pond facing west. It lay near the swamp, at the edge of a large clearing, roughed out by the Indians decades earlier. Here, at the source of Mill River, William must have mused, civilization cannot disturb the waters anymore. The pond was full of fish, and the nearby swamp full of fowl. Let the town struggle with one another: the Witherells will find peace by the Winneconnet.

What Dorothy thought of the move can only be guessed. The nearest neighbor was 5 or 6 miles south. William occasionally went into town for provisions, or drill, or meetings, leaving his wife home with the children. William Jr., though, was now nearing manhood at 18, so could be assumed to provide manly protection if needed.

Living on the outskirts of civilization didn't deter William Sr. from colonial participation. On the contrary, he soon flew into activity, as if the family's bold move fired his ambition. He chose a troubled decade.

Plymouth Colony at war

Violence plagued the colony throughout the 1670's. William began inauspiciously enough by again sitting as a grand juryman at Plymouth, June 7, 1670. Before the end of the decade, William, Plymouth Colony, and New England endured the most serious challenge to their very existence. During the '60s and on into the 1670's, King Philip, sachem of the Wampanoags, became increasingly warlike. The forty-year truce Massassoit, Philip's father, enjoyed with the Pilgrims eroded as the English population, and appetite for land, grew. Philip's Indian nation, the Pokanoket Confederacy, once roamed free throughout all southeastern New England. First the plague came wiping out entire tribes, and greatly weakening the once great nation. Then, in the wake of this tragedy came the English hordes. Philip, whose name was changed at his request by the Plymouth Colony General Court from Metacom to Philip in 1661, like his father, stubbornly rejected the English religion. Unlike his father, he was impetuous and not a diplomat. Faced with an untenable situation, he began to make thinly-veiled warlike moves.

Warily rising to the challenge, Plymouth Colony requested a conference with the Indian leader. Taunton was chosen as the meeting place. On April 13, 1671, Governor Thomas Prince, Josias [or Josiah] Winslow, and Constant Southworth, representatives from the Old Colony, grimly filed along one side of Taunton's meeting house. Behind them came other colony leaders and a delegation from Massachusetts Bay, chosen as arbitrators. Then the harassed King Philip and his warriors entered and took their seats opposite the English. No doubt William Witherell, becoming a political and military leader among Taunton men, came down from his Winneconnet interlude and took his place opposite the Indians. Facing a wall packed with fierce Indians chilled William. A single, jaunty feather stuck saucily in their straight black hair, their dark features colored by black, yellow, red, or white painted faces, and their sinewy bodies covered by a mere breechcloth, or perhaps deerskin mantles and leggins, they at once appeared frightening and oddly colorful.

Five Indian confederacies, or nations, grouped along the immediate New England coast from Maine to Connecticut. Furthermost northeast ranged the Pawtucket, then moving south, around Boston, the Massachusetts nation, severely decimated by the plague early in the century. The Pokanoket confederacy extended from the Massachusetts to the Narrangansett Bay. This nation, now reduced to an area around Mt. Hope Bay and scattered along Cape Cod, once covered all of Plymouth Colony. Now, because of the same plague its chief sachem (hence king) Philip, sachem of the Wampanoag tribe, ruled over a mere shadow of what the Pokanoket population once was. Across the bay from the Pokanoket lay the powerful Narragansetts, located in central Rhode Island. Still a virogous nation, they were troubled little by the killing plague. The feared Pequod nation dominated eastern Connecticut. The Mohegans of Central Connecticut, once a tribe of this nation, rebelled against the tyranical Pequods in 1634, thereby winning their independence. They at once, for protection, became friendly toward the English. Daniel Wetherell (no. 9) of New London, cousin of William Witherell, and an early leader of the Connecticut Colony, met with Uncas, sachem of the Mohegans, in June, 1675, to attest to their loyalty in a season of increasing tension. Uncas, remaining a friend to the end of his days, mentioned Daniel Wetherell in his will. Back from the coast, in Central Massachusetts, were found the Nipmucks, amongst whom King Philip later took refuge. Neither Indian nor white man wanted the singularly powerful and independent Mohawks of western Massachusetts as their enemy. Philip tried, but failed --fortunately for the English--to enlist their aid in the coming war.

No accurate assessment of the Indians' strength can be made, but it is estimated that there were approximately 40,000 Indians in Southern New England after the plague of 1617-18. Their numbers might have increased slightly by the 1670's, although the white man's diseases kept their numbers in check.

Back at Taunton's meeting house in April, 1671, King Philip protested to the stern Englishmen that his warlike preparations were for battle with the Narragansetts. The colony leaders knew they were meant for the English. Philip, caught in a lie, on April 3, 1671, signed a letter of submission to the English, and agreed to turn over his accumulating arms to the colony leaders. He never in fact followed through on his agreement.

The gathering storms perhaps influenced the town's vote as William "Witherley" was chosen Taunton's deputy or representative to the Plymouth Colony General Court on June 5, 1671. The Court, as the Colony's sole legislative body, had 22 deputies, and was a direct outgrowth of the early Pilgrims' governing experience. In 1671, William rode the twenty-five miles to sit as one of twenty-two colony legislators under Gov. Thomas Prince. Respecting the value of the Indians' gift to the Pilgrims, the deputies were paid for their official duties in bushels of corn.

To balance his state duties, he was also, selected on June 5, 1671, "to see to the gathering in of the minister's maintenance" in Taunton.

Shortly after, on July 8, 1671, a colony contingent of 102 men were raised to be at readiness when the Grand Sachem of the Pokanokets came to turn in his arms, as earlier agreed. Josias Winslow, as Major, commanded the little army, with Lt. John Freeman second in command, and Elisha Hedge and William Witherell as sergeants. This is the first official record listing William as sergeant, and his salary was set at 4 shillings a day. The aggressive, punitive Massachusetts Bay Colony cautioned Plymouth Colony to take it easy on King Philip, so when he marched into Plymouth on August 7th, a garrison of 100 Colony men were at the guard, and the leaders merely had Philip sign another document pledging his peaceful intentions. He did not turn over his arms, but the year ended without war. William was now 44. For the first few years, his family was alone on Taunton's northern frontier. As an outpost, they no doubt had occasional scares and threats from the wandering Indians, especially in this time of Indian aggressiveness. One party of Indians, out hunting their lunch, running short from the scarcity of game, became so hungry as they circled the northern edge of Winneconnet that they decided to feast on animals they didn't have to stalk. This chilly evening, noiselessly brushing over the pine needle forest floor in their moccasins, they came upon William's barn, set behind the house, away from the water. With Indian cunning, they slipped inside the barn, selected a two-year-old colt, as if in a meat market, swiftly led him outside away from the barn, killed and roasted the hapless animal, devoured him, raked over the coals while leaving the remains, and most amazing, didn't disturb the sleeping Witherells all the while.[29] They knew where William lived, and only wanted a free meal, so to speak. At that time, hostilities, though on the rise, hadn't burst into flame, so the Indians had no interest in bothering the household.

The family now began to expand. William and his eldest son William Jr., in 1672, were both among the proprietors of Taunton South Purchase, including what is now Dighton and part of Berkley. The second generation was moving into society.

In 1673, besides the growing Indian threat, there were preparations for war against the Dutch of New York. The colony's complaint was "in the surprissal of severall vessals and goods of our confeaderats, and refusing to make just satisfaction for the same upon demand; being alsoe informed of theire threats to invade his Ma[ties]

[Majesty's] subjects on Longe Island, and other ptes [parts] of this countrey.[30]

For this expedition, which never in fact materialized, a force was raised on December 17, 1673, under Captain James Cudworth of Scituate, Lt. John Gorham of Yarmouth, Thomas Harvey, Philip Leonard, John Witherell (no. 14), and William Witherell as sergeants, at 3 shillings per day. Emery's history of Taunton, page 383, mistakenly lists all these 4 sergeants as being from Taunton. It's known that Thomas Harvey and Philip Leonard and William Witherell were from that growing frontier town. But was John Witherell? Perhaps this was John (no. 14), a cousin of William, who was visiting Taunton at the time. This John, later to perish in Sir William Phip's expedition of 1690 against the French at Quebec, was a lieutenant in the French and Indian Wars, so was martial in pursuit. Perhaps, as was a custom in those early days, he went to live with William Witherell for a time as a sort of apprenticeship, or perhaps to help protect William's family, living on the battle line between the English and the Indians. This is mere conjecture, but it's likely he was in Taunton at the time, and at the least confirms the fact that William Witherell of Taunton knew other Plymouth Colony Witherells, his uncle being John's father, the Rev. William Witherell of Scituate. It could have been William of Taunton who arranged for John to be sergeant, or the Rev. William, who knew Josias Winslow.[31] might have arranged for John and William to be sergeants together. Regardless, the expedition never materialized, and John soon married and settled in Eastham on Cape Cod.

The year 1674 was a happier, quieter year for William. On August 26, 1674, William's eldest child, and only daughter, Dorothy, married Elias Irish, and they soon settled near their father's lot by the banks of the Winneconnet. Judging by available records, they never had any children.

But the little family settlement next to the water soon had to leave their idyllic nest and move into Taunton. The charade of peace between the English and Indians ended on June 25, 1675, when King Philip's men plundered Job Winslow's house in Swansea. The gauntlet had been cast. The inevitable came to pass, and the same day six people of Swansea were killed. There ensued through the summer, scattered skirmishes along the Plymouth Colony frontier, and indeed within her borders. The Indians would attack an outpost, burn, kill, and plunder amongst great whooping, then retreat as an English force would arrive, too late.

On July 18, 1675, Taunton's citizenry withdrew within her garrison houses, awaiting an expected Indian attack which never came. But Edward Babbit and John Tisdale of Taunton were killed within the first week of battle. It can be presumed that William's crude house at Winneconnet, the first home built within the future town of Norton, was burned and looted, as well as Dorothy Irish's house. During the war, besides the physical damage done to the town, 15 persons were slain by the Indians in Taunton--eleven men, 2 maids, and 2 youths.[32]

The war, now being fought by the Wampanoags, Nipmucks in Central Massachusetts, and a tribe in what later became Maine, moved into Massachusetts Bay as Philip escaped persistent Plymouth Colony pursuit. The war eventually raged as far as the Connecticut River in western Massachusetts.

Their patience expired, the Commissioners of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Plymouth Colonies finally met in Boston September 9, 1675, and signed a declaration of war.

What the colonies feared most were the other Indian nations joining the battle. Of most immediate concern were the feared Narragansetts, an Algonquin tribe bordering Plymouth Colony and occupying much of the shore of Narragansett Bay. It was this concern that led the commissioners of the colonies, meeting in Boston November 12, 1675, to resolve to attack and destroy the mighty Narragansetts before they inevitably entered the struggle. It was known they were only waiting to see which side was winning before entering. The Indians already fighting were causing such a havoc the Narragansetts would likely soon join with King Philip. In terms of colony survival, it was deemed a wise decision to stage a preemptive attack.

The commissioners resolved to raise 1000 men: 527 from Massachusetts Bay, 315 from Connecticut, and 158 from Plymouth Colony. They further recommended to the three General Courts "that effectual care be taken that the soldiers sent on this expedition be men of strength, courage, and activity; their arms well fired and fit for service;--that their clothing in all respects be strong and warm, suitable for the season. That they have provisions in their knapsacks for a weeks march from their rendezvous ...[33]" They were to provide 1/2 pound of powder and 4 pounds of bullets for each man.

The Massachusetts and Plymouth Colony forces met on December 12, 1675, and marched to Richard Smith's house at Wickford, Rhode Island. Massachusetts had six companies; Plymouth Colony had two--one under Capt. William Bradford, and the other under John Gorham. William Witherell, now 48, was "eldest sergeant"[34] under Gorham. Theophilus Witherell (no. 13), William's cousin, was also a sergeant of the Plymouth Colony forces.

The Massachusetts and Plymouth Colony forces remained at Richard Smith's garrison house from the 12th to 18th while reconnoitering. On the 18th, these forces rendezvoused with the Connecticut troops at Pettyquamscott (near Wickford, R. I.). The Connecticut troops were made up of five companies of 300 English and 150 friendly Pequod and Mohegan Indians, the latter sent by their sachem, Uncas. But the garrison house at which they were to take shelter this night had earlier been burned to the ground and all inhabitants killed. With a deep snow already on the ground, it was a wearisome night.

Josias Winslow, General of the combined forces, and Governor of Plymouth Colony, broke camp before dawn on December 19th. From earlier reconnaisance, it was learned that the 3,500 Narragansetts--men, women and children--were fortified within a fort built on a 5 or 6 acre island within Great or Cedar Swamp, located in what is now S. Kingston, R. I. It was a tiring march through deep snow, the 18 miles south to the swamp.

The Massachusetts troops led the way, with the Plymouth Colony forces in the middle and the Connecticut troops bringing up the rear. Upon reaching the edge of the gruesome swamp, William tried to organize Gorham's company, but they would not be disciplined. With eyes growing narrow and hearts beating fast, his company, along with the other soldiers, rushed headstrong into the swamp in great massed disorder. William grouped his men as best he could while dashing amongst them. It was now early afternoon.

The fort, ringed by rows of palisades, had only one weak point; there was a breach in the palisade bridged by a large tree trunk. This opening was covered by a blockhouse, but the battle had to be joined at this opening.

A first assault directly upon the opening was turned back with heavy losses. The English warming to battle amongst much shouting sent more men on a second attack. These soldiers, amid many dying and wounded lying all about them, and with musket fire tossing back and forth through their ranks, climbed over the 5-foot fallen tree, and successfully entered within the stronghold. There ensued a hideous battle, often hand-to-hand, with drawn cutlasses slicing the enemy to the ground, as hundreds of English poured through the gap toward the retreating Narragansetts.

They seized the blockhouse, and rained fire upon the Indians within. The crescendo of musket fire, sword upon sword, and cries of the dying rose into the thickening air as the mid afternoon winter sky grew gray with coming snow.

William, his whitening beard sprinkled with frost, lay crumpled upon the reddening snow. In the early assaults, many of the officers were mercilessly cut down as they led the desperate charges. With huge gaps opened up in leadership, the non commissioned officers jumped into the breech. William, Gorham's "eldest sergeant," soon found himself climbing over the huge tree trunk and rushing into the blockhouse. From here, he directed the fire of his men. But his men didn't want a defensive battle. Toughened by a night's sleep in the snow, a long, bone-aching march, and six months of Indian murder and mayhem, they wanted to fight. So William and the other sergeants and officers within the ricocheting blockhouse corralled a couple of hundred men, and with a few left behind to give cover fire, threw themselves toward the inner palisade. As William ran low across the battlefield, jumping over fallen warriors, an Indian bullet sang "whack" into his middle-aged body, stood him straight up with its force and pain, and sent him reeling through the air like a human snowflake, to land with a bony thud on the ground. Through a fog, he told his men to keep attacking. He lay there barely conscious and seared with pain as his men rushed past. A few feet from his head, a red-painted Narragansett wriggled on the ground as blood gushed from three bullet wounds on his bare chest. William's half-closed eyes ringed the brave warrior in mist as the Indian made a wheezy grunt, then settled to the earth like a melting snowman.

More English dashed past him. The assault pushed within the inner palisade. The Indians, routed, swiftly flew out the other side of the island fort, and within minutes had blended into the thick, tangled swamp.

The order was given to burn the 500 to 600 wigwams camped in the center. Above the objections of Captain Church, the old "Indian fighter" of Plymouth Colony, the fort's food and grain supply also went up in flames. The Indians would now be without shelter and food for the remainder of the winter.

It was now about four in the afternoon. Suddenly it was still, but growing dark, and a light snow had begun to fall. Josias Winslow, encouraged by his officers and soldiers, ordered a retreat. Again Church objected. He believed the battle-weary army could use the fort's shelter and food supply to recuperate. But the troops would have none of the hideous spot.

Sergeant Witherell, now comforted by his men who brought him within the inner palisade and set him against the pailings, closing his wound, would have welcomed a respite to let his old body build up its strength. But the clamor reached a crescendo, so William limped to his feet, supported by his closest friends. The forced march, pierced by the groans and calls of the wounded and battle-shocked, commenced the eighteen dark, frigid miles through a snowstorm to Richard Smith's at Wickford, arriving at 2:00 in the morning. They had been gone twenty-two hours. Thirty-four died in the march back.

An estimated 300 Narragansett warriors were killed, and 700 wounded. An unknown, but large, number of Indian women and children were also killed within the fort. The Narragansetts were now destroyed as a fighting force, and decimated as a tribe. Without food and shelter, many died the remaining winter. The English, however bloody the encounter, had triumphed. Canonchet, leader of the Narragansetts, managed to escape, but on August 2, 1676, was captured near Stonington, Connecticut, and the following day was executed.

The English army lost approximately 70 killed, and 150 wounded, twenty-three per cent casualties. There were 33 to 40 killed and wounded from Plymouth Colony alone.[35] The site of the bloody engagement is marked by a granite monument, erected in 1906 by the Rhode Island Society of Colonial Wars.

Captain Gorham died February 15th, from wounds suffered at the battle. Major Bradford was severely wounded, but recovered. Massachusetts Bay lost three of her six captains. Connecticut lost four of her five. There was a heavy loss of army leaders, expecially in the early assaults when victory hung in doubt.

Theophilus Witherell (no. 13) was severely wounded "soe as hee is likely to be a cripple all his days."[36] He served valiently, nevertheless, under Captain Michael Pierce. Later, in April, 1676, the Narragansetts, who still fought occasional battles, destroyed Pierce's company of Scituate men near Blackstone, Massachusetts.

William, his wound stabbing him with pain, was forced to endure the horrible march back to Richard Smith's. Not until December 24th was he and at least 27 other Plymouth Colony wounded (including Theophilus), moved to Major Peleg Sanford's house in Rhode Island in the Narragansett Bay, to recuperate. Plymouth Colony later reimbursed Peleg Sanford for "8 yds. of duffls to Sergtt Witherly, ... and other Taunton men, that came wounded to... [his house] Desembr 24."[37] He received aid for at least three weeks, because Sanford's account was also charged for "Sergent Witherell, James Ball, and White for their diatt, lodging and attendance, 2 of them one month, and one of them three weeks."[38]

By early February, William's wounds were healed, and he had returned to his grateful family, garrisoned in beleaguered Taunton. One can imagine the tearful reunion. William had been away from his anxious wife for nearly two months.

There was a "Sergt. Witherly" who remained in Rhode Island until the fall, however. The estate of William Brenton of Rhode Island charged Plymouth Colony "for hire of a roome from the 24 of Desembr unto the 17 of Oct., 76, the day Serjan Witherell went out of it."[39] This was probably Sergeant Theophilus Witherell who, it is recorded, was severely crippled at the Great Swamp Fight. It is doubtful if Sergeant William Witherell could have remained in Rhode Island until October, because he was chosen one of Taunton's constables June 7, 1676.

That summer, as constable, his time was spent defending Taunton from the nearby Indians. He might have gone on one or two expeditions, but at 49, his time and energies were better spent defending the home front. There was indeed a need for home front defenses, for in the spring and summer of 1676, King Philip's War returned to Plymouth Colony in force. Skirmishes raged throughout the colony. The frontier became so threatened that in April, towns on Cape Cod invited Taunton's inhabitants to abandon their homes and remove to the Cape. Taunton declined. The outskirts of Plymouth herself (Halifax) was attacked. Scituate was hit May 30th, when at least 22 buildings and a sawmill were destroyed, and among others, six heads of families were killed. Swansea, Middleboro, Rehoboth, Bridgewater, and of course Taunton saw much destruction. Some of the towns did have to be abandoned, such was the destruction.

There was a scare that King Philip was planning to attack Taunton on July 11th, but the town was forewarned, and Philip, seeing the inhabitants ready within the garrison houses, withdrew, It was said that King Philip had a fondness for Taunton. He often spent time at the Fowling Pond, not far from Taunton, hunting and fishing. The Leonards of Taunton, especially, in happier times, treated him well. It was assumed he gave orders to let Taunton stand until the last. Although Taunton lost many casualties and buildings during the war, it was, ironically perhaps, because of Philip that the town was not entirely engulfed.

It was on one such skirmish in early August near Taunton that the Indian Queen Weetamoe's body was found. As an example to the Indians--many of her subjects were prisoners in Taunton at the time--her head was severed and stuck on a pole in Taunton for all to see. It was not a pretty war.

The Indians had caused much destruction through the summer of 1676, but it became apparent they were fighting a lost cause. They could not fish because the English controlled the coast. There was obviously no time to raise corn and other crops, and with the English constantly, if fitfully, chasing them, their diet was meager, and soon disease and malnutrition took their toll. The Nipmucks of central Massachusetts soon sought peace.

Captain Church was finally given command of a small band of men to ferret out Philip. The wayward sachem, instead of escaping to the friendly Maine Indians, chose to return to his beloved Mt. Hope. Church eventually surrounded Philip's dwindling band, and as Philip tried to escape, a friendly Saconet Indian named Alderman shot and killed Philip on August 22, 1676. Philip's head and one hand were immediately severed as prizes.

The Plymouth Colony Court ordered a Thanksgiving, and soon Philip's head was borne triumphantly into the colony's capitol.

It is estimated that at the beginning of the war, there were 12,000 Indians in Massachusetts and Plymouth colonies, 4000 each in New Hampshire and Maine, and 2500 to 3000 in Rhode Island. Not more than 1/4 became hostile. At the same time, there were approximately 22,000 white men in Massachusetts, 14,000 in Connecticut, 7500 in Plymouth Colony, and 4000 each in Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and Maine.[40]

During the 1-1/2 year war, approximately 1600 English were killed, 13 towns in Massachusetts and Plymouth colonies destroyed, and over 600 buildings were burned. The price was high, but even though scattered skirmishes continued for a few months, the Indians were defeated. Some captured Indians were executed, and many others sold into slavery, but New England was opened up as never before for the white man's inevitable expansion.

William returned to Plymouth as one of the colony's deputies at a special Plymouth Colony Court held the last day of October and first of November, 1676. Life slowly returned to normal.

Last years

By the spring of 1677, William had wound his way north, back up the Massachusetts Bay Path, and had rebuilt his home by the sandy edge of Winneconnet. He had now passed 50. His eldest son William was 26, and little John, having survived the rigors of the war, 13. Dorothy Irish also returned with her husband, and rebuilt their house by the pond. Ephraim, if he was then alive, would have been in his early 20's.

William again appeared on the Plymouth Colony Grand Enquest June 5, 1677. Tragedy befel the family that year, only recently having survived the war. Elias Irish, who married Dorothy Witherell only three years previous, died. William Witherell was appointed administrator of his estate by the Plymouth Colony Court, October 30, 1677. On March 5, 1678, William represented Elias Irish at the settlement of a piece of land at Saconet that John Irish left to his two sons, Elias and John.

On March 2, 1679/80, the Plymouth Colony Court "have ordered and empowered Leift. Gorge Macye and Ensigne Thomas Leonard and William Witherell, of Taunton, to bound the meaddowes on Assonett Necke..."[41] Assonet Neck was a few miles south of Taunton green.

On June 3, 1679, he was again, and for the last time, chosen by the Colony to sit on the Grand Enquest.

The next year, at a May 5th Taunton town meeting, our busy Witherell ancestor was selected along with 6 others to revise the town orders, records of land, etc. It's assumed he was sufficiently well read, for that period at least, to partake of such a detailed organizational task.

William Jr. married Elizabeth Newland March 14, 1681. Within a few years (between 1682-87) William's brother John married Elizabeth's sister Susannah.

In 1682 the Military Company of Taunton was divided into four squadrons "in order to their bringing their arms to meeting on every Sabbath day...with six charges of powder and shot...and if any stay from meeting because they will not bring their armes to meeting, such to be summoned to court."[42] The recent Indian war had made the early colonists still vigilant, even while worshiping God.

William Witherell Sr. headed the second squadron with William Jr. serving under him. John Witherell, a mere 18, marched under the fourth squadron. Ephraim's name doesn't appear on any of the four squadron lists, so apparently was deceased by this date.

In 1683 William spelled his name "Witherell" on a deed.[43]

The year 1684 passed uneventfully, although by now William Jr. and his wife might have presented his parents with their first grand child, William III. (no. 47). Old William's uncle, the Rev. William Witherell of Scituate, died about the time William III was born.

As if to welcome another generation, William Sr. returned to a burst of activity. He again, and for the last time, returned on June 2, 1685, as one of the colony's 28 deputies. He apparently relished his wartime memories, for he is listed in the colony's records as "Serg^{tt} William Witherell Sen^{r}. On June 2, 1685, besides his colony duties, he ("William Witherly") was for the only time in his career chosen as one of Taunton's selectmen. In 1665 the General Court had enacted that there should be "3 or 5 selectmen chosen by the townsmen...for the better managing of the affairs of the respective townships."[44] This traditional form of New England small town government has stubbornly and effectively survived in many corners of the six state region.

Nearly ten years had now passed since the Indians tore through southeastern and central New England. The years embellished William's standing as a raconteur. Born in England, shipped out early as a cabin boy, one of the first settlers of Taunton 42 years earlier, constable, juryman, colony representative, ofttime firebrand, sergeant, Indian fighter, now selectman and first settler on Taunton's northern frontier, he no doubt, his youth long spent, expanded till the lamps grew dim on his long career.

His weathered house along the busy Bay Road became a favored gathering spot; many came to tell, and many came to listen to, full-throated tales. Using his influence, or at least the standing he now held in the community, it was logical that he apply for a license to open an ordinary (tavern, or house of public entertainment). His children had left to built their own lives, so he had empty rooms to let, and empty hours to fill. Therefore, on June 2, 1685, the "Court hath granted liberty to Serg^{tt} William Witherell, of Tanton, to retaile cider, beeir, & strong liquors."[45] These ordinaries, under close supervision, were forbidden "to allow profane singing, dancing, or revelling, under penalty," could not sell liquor on the Sabbath, and were required to clear their houses of all town-dwellers and strangers drinking there, except lodgers[46] by the "shutting in of daylight." But during daylight there were long hours for those travelling the busy Bay Path to stop in and swap tales. These were perhaps William's most satisfying years. A stone erected in 1889 marks the site of William Witherell's ordinary.

However much he retold military exploits, his martial days were over. So in 1686, at 59, he sent Lieut. George Macey, his old friend and former neighbor, along Mill River near Taunton Green, to Plymouth Colony Court to petition for a full discharge. Correspondingly, the court, probably for wounds suffered at the

Narragansett Swamp Fight, paid him, upon discharge, 7 pounds 10 shillings.[47]

Earlier that year, his daughter Dorothy, widowed these past 9 years so probably living with her parents, married on April 1, 1686. She was now in her 30's. No record of any offspring from this union is extant.

In 1687, William--religious to the end--gave 50 acres of land to help pay for the minister's house. The minister at that time was George Shove, the third minister in Taunton's history. Rev. Shove's son, Edward Shove, married Lidia Witherell (no. 38), daughter of Sergt. Theophilus Witherell (no. 13) who fought with William at the Narragansett Swamp Fight. It could be assumed, therefore, that Lidia and her family visited occasionally with William, probably staying at his ordinary, thereby through William, eventually meeting the younger Shove.

On Sept. 12/22, 1687, ancient John Alden, the last of the well known Pilgrims, died in Duxbury at 88.

On February 27, 1688, William Witherell (among others) gave five acres of land to Captain Tipping "for fetching Rev. Mr. Danforth."

The same year, despite an 81-day drought, William's son John and his wife proved fertile, and presented old William and Dorothy with another son, John II. By that date, also Jeremiah, son of William Jr., had been born.

As old Pilgrims were dying, and new Plymouth Colony citizens were being born, so venerable New Plimouth Colony, nearing 70, overflowing with folklore and beginnings, was expiring, while another political entity arose.

Back in the mother country, King James II replaced Charles II on the royal throne December 29, 1686. He immediately abolished the semi-independent colonial governments of New England in January, 1687, and sent over Sir Edmund Andros to Boston, as Royal Governor of all New England. In 1688, New York was added to his administration. His rule was despotic, and the New England colonies, long accustomed to self-government, chafed under his administration.

The Confederation of New England Colonies, having held their last meeting in 1684, therefore didn't meet in 1687 because Andros held sole political authority. The General Courts of the various colonies held sessions in 1686, but were abolished by Andros in 1687 and 1688. The individual assemblies would meet again, while the United Colonies were forever washed into past history.

Andros' rule was short-lived, however, In April, 1689, the Prince of Orange landed in England, and overthrew James II. The Bostonians, without waiting for official confirmation, needed only such a pretext, and immediately arrested Sir Edmund Andros, threw him into prison, and quietly restored their former form of government. The other New England colonies, upon word of the Massachusetts uprising, quickly seized power back from Andros' agents. Governor Hinckley was restored as Plymouth Colony Governor shortly thereafter, and the General Court held sessions that summer.

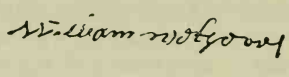
In 1690, William Witherell, aware that--like the colony--he was also expiring, deeded most of his land to his children. The signature shown below, written in 1690, is his only signature extant.



The final session of the Plymouth Colony General Court was held July 7, 1691.

On August 15, 1691, William Witherell drew up his will--the only document extant in his own words[48]--from, as his old hand would have it, the "Colony of New Plimouth in New England."

A devote Puritan to the end, he declared that "my soule I commit to our Blessed lord Jesus: and my Body to the Earth to be decently entered by my children, In hopes of a joyful resurection."

He gave his "halfe a North Purchase" to his only remaining sons, William and John. His "five accers of upland lyeing up at Timothy Meadow" went to his son William. Timothy Meadow was on the northern boundary of Winneconnet Pond. Captain Simeon Witherell (no. 56), grand son of William Witherell Sr. is buried near there in Timothy Plain Cemetery. Simeon, born in 1693, appears to be the only Witherell on this line born in the 1600's with a marked grave.

By 1691, William's son Ephraim was deceased, so William willed the land Ephraim gave back to him to Jeremiah (no. 48), his grand son by William Jr.

William had by 1691 moved from his house on the east side of Winneconnet Pond to a structure built on the south side of the pond, for he gave "ten accers of land lyeing on the south side of the pond by my house" to his daughter "Dorithy Wood that to her heirs born of her Body." Perhaps Dorothy had children by that date, although none can be found.

According to the agreement William and Dorothy made before marriage, William Jr. and John were to pay their mother annually a stated amount. As a final, loving gesture, William gave his wife of over forty years a prized "white yearling heffer to be wholly at her dispose." One can imagine that Dorothy had grown fond of this animal born barely a year, and William wanted her to have it as another reminder of their fruitful years.

Joseph Gray, Samuel Danforth, and Giles Gilbert witnessed the will. Giles Gilbert was involved with William in the "saw mill affair" back in 1664. William signed the will "William Witherill."

Plymouth Colony, its leadership lacking the vision and vigor of the early Pilgrims, recently had been fought over by Massachusetts Bay Colony and New York. Plimouth had never, due to poor leadership and lack of money and influence at the royal court, been able to secure a royal charter guaranteeing their rights as a state. Massachusetts Bay, to the north, peopled by aggressive, enterprising, if stern, leaders, won out over New York, and on October 7, 1691, a new Massachusetts charter passed the Great Seal annexing Plimouth Colony to Massachusetts. Sir William Phips arrived with the new charter May, 1692, as the first Royal Governor of the enlarged Massachusetts. Plymouth Colony had ceased to exist as a separate entity.

William Witherell, as if presaging the end of his beloved colony, died sometime before November 13, 1691, the date Anthony Newland, Joseph White, and again his old friend Giles Gilbert took inventory of his estate. His will was probated November 18, 1691. His estate, valued at 136 pounds 16 shillings, included a "purchase right & halfe in the old town purchase" and "halfe purchase in the North purchase." His South Purchase lands, or any lands given to him as a result of his war service are not mentioned.

So sometime in late October or early November, 1691, with brilliant fall leaves floating to the earth, and fast moving gray clouds overhead announcing another change of seasons, William Witherell of Taunton took his final voyage. With Taunton's Train Band of Militia firing their muskets over his grave, an assemblage including Rev. Shove; William's surviving contemporaries--his wife; William and Dorothy Wood; William Jr. and Elizabeth and their children William and Jeremiah; John and Susannah and their children John Jr. and Abigail (born March 28, 1691), all stood near the edge of the grave site, two hundred yards east of the blue Winneconnet.[49] As William was lowered into his grave, an earthly interlude between the tranquil Winneconnet and the wild tangled swamp--he returned not to dust, but to the waters which ever enveloped his long life.

The end.

The author of this chapter on Norton, Mass. states that Dunn's vessel "had sailed a distance up Taunton River." He didn't quote the source of such speculation, and no other author has ventured that Dunn indeed made such a voyage. However, because Captain Dunn was the master of a vessel, and was an early proprietor of Taunton, it is not unlikely that he wanted to see Taunton first-hand before investing in it.

10 It was an early family tradition that William Witherell was Captain William Dunn's cabin boy. No authority has challenged this tradition.

11 The Genealogical Advertiser (1: 21) states that, according to Rev. William Witherell's records at Cambridge University, he came from Yorkshire, in northern England. The records, though, do not list the town he came from.

The Holden Genealogy by Eben Putnam (Boston, 1923) believes that John Witherell (no. 3) was also from the north of England. Ralph Day and James Thorpe, kinsmen John mentioned in his will, were believed by the author to be connected to the Yorkshire immigrants, therefore John's connection to Yorkshire.

Christopher Wetherill, progenitor of a long and distinguished line of Pennsylvania Wetherill's, came from Sherburn, England, to Burlington, New Jersey, in 1683.

23 One wonders what William would do if he could see Mill River today. On November 25, 1974, I stood shivering on the Washington Street Bridge looking up Mill River at the sludge and grime choaking the once swift blue stream. Manufacturers, and again civilization, had, alas, debased the river in contempt of those who once loved her.

49 William was presumably buried in an old burying ground (now unused), situated beside the meadow, 40-50 rods northeast of the outlet of Winneconnet Pond, near the present Taunton-Norton line. The spot was probably never formally set apart for burial purposes, and was in 1859 being used as part of a pasture for sheep and cattle. The site was later abandoned as a burial ground because of its proximity to the boggy meadow--the graves, when dug, becoming partially submerged.

CHAPTER 6. JOHN ROGERS, THE SMITHFIELD MARTYR

John Rogers, pioneer of the Protestant Reformation in England and its first martyr, compiled the first authorized English version of the Bible under the pseudonym "Thomas Matthew," and thus never claimed for himself the honors to which he was justly entitled. We are deeply indebted to Foxe[1] and Chester[2] for doing him historical justice. The serious reader should consult them for further information. This Chapter will cover the highlights of the life of this venerable religious figure.

John Rogers was born about 1500, probably in Deritend, in the parish of Aston (near Birmingham), the son of John and Margery (Wyatt) Rogers of Deritend. He was educated at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, where he took a B.A. in 1525. The same year he was chosen Junior Canon at the Cardinal's College (later called Christ's College) in Oxford, and soon after went into holy orders. He then officiated from Dec. 26, 1532 until probably late in 1534 as Rector of the Church of Holy Trinity (or Trinity the Less), in London.

Late in 1534 Rogers accepted an invitation of the "Merchants of St. Thomas 'a Becket" to the Chaplaincy at Antwerp, Belgium, knowing that there he could enjoy more freedom of conscience than would be tolerated in England. He went to Antwerp freely, not in exile, although while there he became intimately acquainted with William Tyndale, who was in exile for his religious beliefs. He then separated himself entirely from the Roman Catholic Church. While in Antwerp, Tyndale (and probably Rogers) resided at the home of Thomas Poyntz, an English merchant, where they began work translating the Bible from Latin to English. Tyndale, however, was arrested early in 1535, and was murdered Oct. 6, 1536.

Rogers then continued the work. Believing marriage to be lawful for the clergy, he took a wife in 1536 or early 1537, whose name was Adriana Pratt (alias Adriana de Weyden[3]). She was of the Protestant faith and from an Antwerp family. He then moved his family to Wittenberg, Saxony, probably for personal safety, as well as to be in closer communication with Martin Luther, Philipp Schwarzert Melanchthon, and other leaders of the Reformation. He became proficient in the German language, and took charge of a congregation, to which be preached for several years.

The first authorized, complete English Bible was published in 1537 (by late July), and was known as "The Translation of Thomas Matthew," or "The Matthew Bible," and was printed in England. John Rogers (alias Thomas Matthew) is perhaps not entitled to the credit for having made a complete original translation of the entire Bible, but he is to be regarded as something higher than a mere proofreader. The first complete, printed English Bible, although not authorized, was translated by Myles Coverdale, and was published in 1535. Tyndale published his translation of the New Testament in 1525, and, assisted by John Frith, published the Pentateuch (first five books of the Old Testament) in English, 1530. After Tyndale's death in 1536, what remained of the Old Testament (34 books) was completed by John Rogers, who prepared it for publication, including many marginal notes.

Rev. John Rogers (ca. 1500-1555), from the original in the Heroologia (reprinted from Chester).

Rogers must also be credited the authorship of the first English Bible concordance, which he called "A Table of the Principal Matters contained in the Bible, to which the Readers may find and practise many Common Places," which was alphabetically arranged in 26 folio pages. The Thomas Matthew Bible itself comprises 1,110 folio pages with two columns per page, each column containing 60 lines, and printed entirely in black letter. There are 78 wood cuts, and the size of the printed page (embracing the text only) is 28.6 x 16.5 cm. The Bible is divided into books, chapters, and paragraphs, but not verses. The Papists issued an edict to suppress all Bibles, and particular hostility was expressed toward the Thomas Matthew translation. As a result, nearly all copies of the original were destroyed. Nevertheless, the British Museum possesses three copies, one of which is in near perfect condition, and attests to Rogers' scholarly accomplishments.

John Rogers returned to England sometime after King Edward VI came to the throne on Jan. 28, 1547. Although the date of his return is unknown, it is known that he was there by Aug. 1, 1548. He became vicar of St. Sepulchre's, and was promoted by Bishop Ridley to be an assistant at St. Paul's Cathedral in London. His wife and eight children remained in Germany while he resided in London at the home of Edward Whitchurch, who published for him his translation of Melanchthon's "Weighing of the Interim." He secured, by special act of Parliament,[4] the legal naturalization of his wife and those of his children who were born in Germany, but not without some opposition, stemming from his Protestant beliefs.

Serious trouble for Rogers began upon the death of Edward VI on July 6, 1553, when Edward's sister Mary began her reign. Queen Mary[5] surrounded herself with counsellors and ministers loyal to the Roman Church. Rogers began preaching at Paul's Cross, St. Paul's Cathedral, and although he was recognized by the Privy Council as one of the Cathedral's ablest ministers, one of his sermons aroused the anger of the priesthood. In it, he preached against the growing power of the pope in England, enlarged on the virtues of the late king, and urged the people to remain true to the reformed religion. For this, he was summoned before the Privy Council, but defended himself so eloquently that he was dismissed with only a warning. The Council's indulgence, however, displeased the queen, who considered him a mischievous heretic, and ordered him arrested. Rogers was then ordered confined to his own house for longer than 5 months[6] for allegedly speaking out against the queen, and was deprived of the means to support his family. On Jan. 27, 1554, on orders from Bonner, Bishop of London, he was transferred to Newgate Prison, with thieves and murderers, where he did much writing, all of which was confiscated.

On Jan. 22, 1555, Rogers was brought again before the Privy Council, headed by Lord Chancellor Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester. Rogers was made to kneel, and was asked to assent to the supremacy of the Pope, but he boldly replied that he recognized Christ as the only head of the Church. After some debate on the matter, Rogers was ordered back to prison.

Six days later, Cardinal Reginold Pole, as Lord Legate of England -- a direct representative of the Pope -- issued his commission for judicial proceedings against all persons who might have violated the new laws against heresy. The tribunal for Rogers occurred in the afternoon of the following day.

Rogers was asked whether he would return to the Roman Catholic Church. He promptly replied in the negative, but declared his willingness and ability to prove that the doctrines he preached were based on the Scriptures. This proposition was rejected. Gardiner next asked whether Rogers believed that the bread and wine used at the ceremony of the Lord's Supper were really and substantially, the body and blood of Christ. He replied that this was a subject with which he had not hitherto meddled, but that since all their other doctrines were false, and could be defended only by force and cruelty, he no longer had any doubt that this was as false as the rest, and they might therefore add that to his former admissions. The tribunal was closed at about 4 PM, and Rogers was given until the next day to return to the Roman Catholic Church and receive mercy.

The next day, Rogers was again asked whether he had decided to recant and receive the mercy offered him. Again he insisted on his right to discuss the various questions, but this was denied, and he then was condemned on two charges: that he had denounced the Church of Rome as anti-Christian, and that he had denied the real presence of Christ in the Sacrament. He was then turned over to Bonner, Bishop of London, who declared Rogers a heretic. A report of the proceedings was sent to court, and a writ was issued for the burning of Rogers at the stake, at Smithfield. His last appeal was that he might speak to his wife, to counsel her on what to do with their ten children. But this request was denied on the grounds that he was a priest and could not have a wife.

Rogers was returned to Newgate prison, accompanied by numerous, heavily armed officials. The journey back to prison was routed through the Bishop's house (probably to mislead bystanders), then through St. Mary Overy's churchyard, into the streets, across London Bridge, towards Newgate. The route was lined with well wishers holding lighted candles, who cheered and offered prayers and thanksgivings as the procession passed.

At the prison, he was placed in solitary confinement for five days, but was not told the day or hour of his death. When the fatal day arrived (Feb. 4, 1555), Rogers, asleep, was warned suddenly by the keeper's wife, to prepare himself for the fire. Being at last aroused, and told to "make haste," he said, "Is then this the day? If it be so I need not be careful of my dressing." Rogers was then taken to Bonner to be degraded. He again asked to see his wife, but was denied. David Woodroffe, the sheriff, addressed Rogers to the effect that he might even then revoke what Woodroffe called his "abominable doctrine" and his "evil opinion of the Sacrament of the Altar."

Rogers replied, "That which I have preached, I will seal with my blood!"

"Then thou art a heretic!" said the sheriff.

Rogers replied meekly, "That shall be known at the day of judgment."

Woodroffe continued, "Well, I will never pray for thee!"

"But I will pray for you," replied Rogers, which silenced the sheriff.

Between 9 and 10 AM, Rogers was led from prison toward Smithfield by several armed guards. Thousands of spectators lined the route, and heard Rogers repeat the 51st Psalm all the way. At Smithfield, his wife, his ten children, and his eleventh child, an infant whom he had never seen, were waiting in the crowd, along with Rochester, Comptroller of the Queen's household, Sir Richard Southwell, the sheriffs, and a large number of people. He was then tied to the stake, a few paces in front of the entrance gate of the Church of St. Bartholomew. When the flames were ignited, he passed his hands through the fire, rubbed them together as though washing them to rid himself of impurities, then raised them toward Heaven until he lost consciousness, and was burned to ashes.

John Rogers was the first of many to martyr themselves under the rule of Queen Mary for the same Christian cause. Their blood gave vitality to the feeble beginnings of the Protestant Reformation, which eventually secured the blessings of religious freedom in England.

ANCESTRY (BACK TO ADAM) OF JOHN ROGERS, THE SMITHFIELD MARTYR, SUPPOSED ANCESTOR OF THE WITHERELL FAMILY

In discussing the ancestry of Rev. William Witherell, Deane,[1] in his History of Scituate, stated "There is a tradition here which has been handed down for truth, that his mother was the daughter of John Rogers, the Smithfield martyr." Inasmuch as Rogers was killed in 1555, and William was not born until ca. 1600, this gap of 45 years was quite possibly spanned by two generations rather than one, thus making William a great-grandson rather than a grandson of the martyr. If we also accept the tradition that there was an uncle-nephew relationship between Rev. William Witherell and William Witherell of Taunton, Mass., as given by Savage,[2] then John Rogers would be an ancestor of the latter's descendants also.

Chester,[3] in his biography of Rogers, included a statement of the martyr's ancestry, going back as far as William the Conqueror. We are indebted to Albert F. Schmuhl of Salt Lake City, Utah, a genealogist affiliated with the Mormon Church, for his research on earlier ancestors, going back as far as Adam.[4] This was painstakingly compiled from Biblical as well as secular history.

Thus, the descent of John Rogers, from Adam took 145 generations, and covered a span of some 5,500 years. This averages about 38 years per generation, which seems rather large, but can be explained by the extreme longevity (by our standards, at least) of the Biblical figures in the first several generations.[5] We have tried to verify the facts presented here, insofar as possible. Whether you, the reader, are skeptical or not, we think you will find this fascinating reading.

SECTION II.

GENEALOGY

"One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever."
(Ecclesiastes 1:4)

Explanatory Note

This genealogy is written in a form that should be easy to follow. Numbers in parentheses immediately following the name of a family head refer to his Witherell/Wetherell/Witherill ancestors, beginning with his father. Names of the children of each family head are numbered consecutively, in the order of their birth, if known. Those children who married and had children of their own are given an asterisk (*) before their number, and considered later as family heads of the next generation. It is beyond the scope of this book to go into the genealogy of descendants of daughters, because after marriage they no longer bear the Witherell/Wetherell/Witherill surname. In some cases, however, their children are simply listed by name (but not numbered), if this information was easily obtained.

Finally, we recognize that no genealogy of this size can be written without errors. It would be helpful if our readers would kindly call these to our attention whenever they are found. We have sprinkled some of our statements with "prob." and "perh.", according to the degree of doubt.

Abbreviations commonly used throughout are:

ae.	age(d)	div.	divorced
att.	attended	grad.	graduated
b.	born	int.	intention
bp.	baptized	m.	married
bro.	brother	perh.	perhaps
bur.	buried	prob.	probably
ca.	circa (about)	rem.	removed
ch.	child(ren)	res.	resided or residence
Co.	county or company
d.	died	sep.	separated
dau.	daughter	sis.	sister
		yrs.	years

FIRST GENERATION

1. _____ WETHERELL
b. ca. 1565? res. prob. northern England. According to tradition, he married a dau. or grand dau. of Rev. John Rogers, the Smithfield, Martyr, who m. Adriana Pratt. (See more on John Rogers elsewhere in this book.) This Wetherell prob. d. 16__.
Issue b. England (perh. others):

2. SARAH[1] b. ca. 1589. m. (1624) Stephen Fosdick (b. prob. northern England, 1584, d. Malden, Mass., May 21, 1664). The Fosdick genealogy[2] says that Stephen came from Wenham Magna (or Great Wenham), 14 mi. SW of Ipswich, in Suffolk, England. He was previously married (1612, in Hadleigh, 8 mi. No. of Great Wenham) to Anna Harre. Upon Sarah's marriage, she had 6 of Stephen's ch. to care for, by his previous marriage. Sarah accompanied her husband and 8 ch. from England in 1634/5 and res. (1635) Charlestown, Mass. Stephen Fosdick's will, dated Feb. 23, 1663/4, was probated June 21 following. By wife Sarah, Stephen Fosdick had 2 ch.: John and Mary. Their son John Fosdick had a son, Capt. Samuel Fosdick of New London, Conn., who m. (Nov. 1, 1682) Mercy Picket, sister of Adam Picket, who m. Hannah Wetherell (no. 26). The Fosdick genealogy speculates that this John Fosdick (son of Stephen was prob. educated in the Free School which Charlestown established in 1636 with William Witherell (no. 5) its first school master. "...and inasmuch as he [William Witherell] may have been related to John's mother, Sarah, it is likely that John received full advantage of the instruction."

*3. JOHN b. 1594.

*4. _____(son) b. ? He was the father of William Witherell (no. 7) of Taunton, Mass., who, according to Savage[3] and other authorities, was prob. nephew of William Witherell (no. 5).

*5. WILLIAM (Rev.) b. ca. 1600.

SECOND GENERATION

3. JOHN WETHERELL (1) (also WITHERELL, WITHERALL, WITHERLL, WETHERILL, and perh. WITHERLEY) b. England, 1594. m. (16__, prob. England) Grace _____ (b. 1596, d. Dec. 16, 1670/1, ae. 75), whom he deposed in 1654. Savage[1] called him prob. a bro. of Rev. William Witherell (no. 5). We speculate that he may have been the John Witherley who was Master of the ship Hercules that sailed from Sandwich, Kent, England, in March, 1634/5, bringing William Witherell and his family to Plymouth Colony. The earliest record of John Wetherell in New England is 1639 in Sudbury, Mass. (a plantation given to residents of Watertown to settle), and he was one of the original proprietors (assigned in 1640).[2] In Dec., 1641, he bought from J. Knight, a homestall [homestead] of 18 acres in Newtown, Mass. (which later became Cambridge), "about 3/5 of a mile NW of Fresh Pond," bounded on the North and East by the Cambridge line, on the South by J. Morse's property and common land, and on the West by common land and the townbough. On May 18, 1642, he is listed as a freeman of Watertown, Mass. The records of Watertown further state that:

> "At a publique towne meetinge 10 (11) 1647 the towne gave: to John Witherll: there right in the palisado that inclosed the woulfe pen."

Between 1648 and 1659, John got credit for 102 foxes and one wolf. The Watertown records of Dec. 15, 1657 state:

> "Due John Witherall to see to the keeping of the order of hogs $0^{l}__0^{s}__6^{d}$".

In a petition to the General Court in March, 1663/4, John mentions his loving brother [in law], Stephen Fosdick of Charlestown, who died, leaving his wife, ae. 75, to whom he was m. nearly 40 yrs. ago. John filed another petition on June 7, 1664, in behalf of his sister Sarah, ae. 75, calling her an "aged, infirm, crasie wife [widow of the late Stephen Fosdick]...lame of her feet and going with crutches," and asking for relief.[3] John Wetherell d. June 23, 1672 in Watertown, leaving no male descendants. His will of Jan. 9, 1671/2 gives decent legacy to Rev. John Sherman, and property to kinsmen Ralph Day and James Thorpe of Dedham, Mass., to kinswoman Mary Webb, and to William Priest of Watertown. The inventory of his estate came to 110 pounds.

11 The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy 2 : 658; 4 : 424. S. H. Emery's History of Taunton, Mass. (1889) erroneously called Lidia a dau. of Rev. William Witherell, but actually she was a granddaughter.

11a Sir William Phips (1651-1695) was a treasure fisherman, and later in life (1692-1695) served as Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony. Considerable biographical material has been written of him. When his naval expedition sailed from Hull, Mass. on Aug. 8, 1690, there were 4 ships of war and 28 smaller vessels, with a total of 2,200 men aboard. They sailed around Nova Scotia, into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and approached the walled city of Quebec by way of the St. Lawrence River. Upon their arrival in October, he called for the immediate surrender of Count Louis de Baude Frontenac's forces, but received a scornful reply, and was answered by gunfire. Phips' artillery proved inadequate for an attack on such a stronghold, and he also suffered from the complete failure of his cooperating land forces under command of Generals Winthrop and Livingston, which were to attack Montreal. The latter forces were plagued with inadequate supplies and transportation, indifference among the Indian allies, incompetence in their command, and jealousy among their leaders. The naval expedition against Quebec failed because of untrained leadership, untrained troops, weakness in artillery, cold stormy weather, and an outbreak of smallpox among the soldiers. Violent storms took a further toll on the return voyage. Phips reached Boston on Nov. 19, 1690, followed during the next 3 months by the straggling vessels of his fleet, 3 or 4 of which never returned. (See: (1) Thayer, Henry O. b. Nov. 2, 1752. After his mother's remarriage to Benjamin Cobb, Joshua's surname was changed from Witherell to Witherle. Revolutionary War soldier. m. (June 20, 1776, in Boston, Mass.) Rebecca Howe (b. Boston, Nov. 17, 1755, d. Sept. 17, 1800, in Boston), bro. of David Howe, a storekeeper in Castine, Me. They res. Boston on Washington St., at the part then known as "The Neck." The present E. Waltham St. was out through the Witherle estate. Joshua was a coppersmith, with a shop in the heart of Boston, and also owned a water-powered mill in Dedham, Mass., where heavy work connected with his business was done. In 1787 he was appointed Mint Master. He erected a single-story building at the rear of his house lot, where for more than a year he minted coppper cents and half cents. These coins were known as Massachusetts cents, and Joshua Witherle gained a reputation as "the cent maker." Some of these coins may still be extant in collections. However, with the advent of a national coinage, private manufacture became unnecessary. Joshua attended, and perhaps joined, John Murley's church in Boston. He d. 2a Barshebe Wilde is a direct descendant of Mayflower Pilgrims

John Alden and William Mullins. Her lineage is as follows:
(a) Barshebe Wilde was dau. of Abigail Bass, who m. John Wilde, Jr. (son of John Wild).
(b) Abigail Bass was dau. of Samuel Bass who m. Mary Adams (dau. of Joseph Adams).
(c) Samuel Bass was son of Ruth Alden, who m. John Bass (son of Samuel Bass).
(d) Ruth Alden was dau. of John Alden (of the Mayflower), who m. Priscilla Mullins, dau. of William Mullins of the Mayflower.

3 Mentioned as being a cousin of Dr. James Witherell (no. 252). Adams, Andrew N. 1870. A History of Fair Haven, Vt. Leonard and Phelps, Fair Haven.

4 Another possible identity of Charles' 2nd wife is Sarah (Woods) Tarbell (b. Groton, Mass., May 6, 1726, d. Nov. 11, 1790, in Pepperell, Mass.), widow of William Tarbell, and dau. of John and Sarah (Longley) Woods. However, in consideration of the birth dates of the children and the age of the mother, the identity of the Sarah Tarbell given in the text is more likely correct.

5 The spelling "Wetherel" appeared on his birth record and tombstone. On his marriage record it appeared as "Wetherell," and in the 1790 census as "Witherill."

6 Chatham was S. E. of Wethersfield, and is no longer incorporated as a town.

252. JAMES WITHERELL (Ensign, Dr., Judge, and Secretary of the Territory of Michigan)[2] (122?, 54, 20, 7, 4, 1) b. Mansfield, Mass., June 16, 1759. He volunteered in the Revolutionary Army in June, 1775, at the age of 16, serving initially at the seige of Boston. After the British were driven out of the city, he served with the Continental Army during the entire Revolutionary War until it was disbanded at Newburg, N. Y. in 1783. During this period, he participated in the battles of White Plains (where he suffered severe wounds), Long Island, Stillwater, Bemis' Heights, and was present at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne at Saratoga, and the execution of Gen. Andre at Tappan. He was also in camp with Gen. Washington at Valley Forge through the terrible winter of suffering and starvation, and it was once his duty to call off the number or name of the different companies as Washington rode down the lines. As a soldier in the 11th Mass. Regt., James Witherell served as adjutant and Ensign, and participated in the Battle of Monmouth. When the Continental Army was disbanded in 1783, he had, after 8 years' military service to his country, just his uniform and $70 in continental currency. With this, it is said, he "treated a brother officer to a bowl of punch, and set out penniless to fight the battle of life."

James then rem. to Conn., where he studied medicine at Yale College. After an internship with Dr. Billings of Mansfield, Mass., he was licensed to practice in 1788. He then rem. to Hampton, Vt., where he res. with a friend, Samuel Beaman, and became a very successful and popular physician. A letter from Beaman's son, Rev. N. S. S. Beaman, D. D., dated Troy, N. Y., Oct. 5, 1869, and printed in The History of Rutland County, Vt. (1882) gives a glimpse of James' positive character and personality:

> "...As to Dr. Witherell, I knew him well for many years, as he was my father's family physician. He was a man of fine manly appearance, tall and well proportioned. In his profession he was considered among the first in the neighboring towns. He was agreeable in his manners, and inclined to be facetious in his visits to his patients, deeming a pleasant face one of the best potions he could possibly administer at his first visit. He was a man of considerable reading beyond his profession, and he had, as was said, several philosophical works of the French atheistical and deistical class, which were quite popular among certain politicians of that day. It has been asserted that Prophet Miller, of Hampton, was in the habit of dipping into these works, about the time of Mr. Madison's war with England, and that he was the expounder of Voltaire and other infidels before he engaged with Daniel and the other Prophets. I record this from popular rumor and belief, and not from my own personal knowledge; but circumstances might be stated to confirm this position. That the future prophet was the pupil of the Doctor is well known.

"I have stated that Dr. Witherell, while in Fair Haven, was inclined to facetiousness, and I might add to jocoseness or punning, for the purpose of confounding those who thought but little, or not at all. His associations were sometimes such as to puzzle a "philosopher" or a "fool." I recollect he one morning came into my father's laughing heartily at the wonderment into which he had thrown a simple neighbor by saying to him: 'Well, Mr. _____, it is muggy, hot, and chilly this morning.' In analyzing the adjectives the man remained silent, and the Doctor left him to his task. He sometimes greatly amused and sometimes equally vexed his patients. He was a man of influence in his town, and I believe honored his office in Michigan as a United States Judge..."

In 1789, James Witherell moved to Fair Haven, Vt., at that time a sparsely settled town, and continued to practice his medical profession. Major Tilly Gilbert, and James' nephew, Elijah Coleman studied medicine with him, the latter going away in 1808.

James was about 6 ft. tall, erect in form, with a stalwart frame. He had a clean shaven face, blue eyes, brown hair, ruddy complexion, pronounced nose, and a resolute mouth. He generally wore the sober suit of black, and a low-crowned, wide-brimmed beaver hat of a bright buff color, and with a nap a quarter inch long. A number of seals hung from his watch fob, which was in fashion at the time.

He m. (Nov. 11, 1790, in Smithfield, R. I.) Amy Hawkins (b. Smithfield, 17__, d. 1849, in Detroit, Mich.), dau. of Charles and Sarah (Olney) Hawkins (a Quaker couple, who had rem. to Fair Haven in 1786). Amy was also a descendant of Roger Williams. She is said to have been of small stature but of great spirit, and had been converted to Methodism at an early age.

James took the oath of allegiance in Sept., 1790, and in Apr., 1791, purchased ca. 30 acres of land from Elisha Kilburn of Hampton, on the border of the river, in the west part of Fair Haven. In Oct., 1791, he also purchased the house in which he was then living, and the 1-1/2 acres of land at the corner of the road from Dr. Stephen Hall, whose place as a physician he seems to have taken. He afterwards purchased from Charles Rice and others a large portion of what in 1882 constituted Hamilton Wescott's farm.

Although not trained as a lawyer, James Witherell was interested in politics, and was elected for a term in office in the Vt. House of Representatives (1798-1802), then was appointed Assoc. Judge of Rutland County (1801-3), Chief Justice of the county court of Rutland County (1803-6), and member of the Governor's Council (1802-6). He was then elected as a Democrat to the 10th U. S. Congress (House of Representatives), serving from March 4, 1807 to May 1, 1808. During his term in office he had the pleasure of voting in favor of the act to abolish the slave trade in the states, which became law in 1808.

While a U. S. Congressman, and being recommended by Senator Nathaniel Chipman of Vt., James Witherell was appointed on Apr. 3, 1808 by Pres. Jefferson to be one of three judges of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Michigan, replacing Judge Bates, who had resigned in 1806. James thus resigned from his seat in Congress and travelled to the vast new territory, arriving in Detroit in Oct., 1808. Michigan Territory extended from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi River, and contained about 3000 white inhabitants. His new assignment proved challenging. The Governor (William Hull) and three Judges (Witherell, Woodward, and Griffin) together constituted the territorial government, and exercised executive, judicial, and legislative powers. There was no appeal from their laws and decisions except to Congress. Among their duties were to act as a Land Board, and to lay out anew the young city of Detroit. The appointment of James Witherell as Judge gave Gov. Hull the support he needed, because he was often at odds with Judges Woodward and Griffin, and therefore in a hopeless minority. The absence of any one of the four sometimes led to hostile legislation by the opposing majority present. James Witherell was author and compiler of what became known as the "Witherell Code" of law--a criminal bill which, among other things, punished unauthorized banking. This effectively ended the Detroit Bank, in which Judge Woodward was interested, and who challenged its legality. The Witherell Code, nevertheless, prevailed.

In 1810, his wife Amy and their 6 ch. moved to Detroit to be with James. The first place the family dwelt in was a 2-story log house on the River Road in Springwells township, west of Clark Ave., on the site later occupied by Jewell tannery. On July 4, 1810, at the breakfast table, the Judge proposed that his family have a celebration. One of the sons was sent to get an old Frenchman who owned a gun. After the Judge read the Declaration of Independence, the boys spoke and sang, and the patriotic exercises were punctuated by the old Frenchman firing his gun. After dinner the Judge related his military adventures in the Revolutionary War, and Amy spoke of her brother, who was taken prisoner of war and three times imprisoned in the Jersey prison ship and experienced its horrors. Times still, however, were too unsettled, and the hostilities of the Indians induced Amy and the younger children to return to Vt. in the fall of 1811, and they stayed in W. Poultney. James and his older children then moved to the house formerly occupied by Capt. Hamtramck, near the bank of Detroit River on Jefferson Ave. (James' son Benjamin later wrote under the pen-name of Hamtramck.)

When the war with England was declared in 1812, the only Revolutionary officer in the Territory, in Gov. Hull's absence was James Witherell. James was given the rank of Major, and served as commander of the "Legion" ordered to defend the territory, and was soon afterward placed in command of a battalion of volunteers. Upon Gen. Hull's surrender of Detroit to the British troops of Gen. Brock, Maj. Witherell refused to surrender his troops, but let them disperse. He disagreed with Hull on the subject of surrender, and broke his sword across his knee rather than give it up to the enemy. He, with his son, Lt. J. C. C. Witherell and son-in-law, Col. Joseph Watson, were then taken prisoner of war, and brought to Kingston, Ontario, Canada, where they were shortly released on parole, and went to W. Poultney, Vt. to be with their family and to await their exchange. When this was accomplished, James returned to Detroit and resumed his former duties.

In 1815, he purchased for $4500 the 136-1/2 acre farm of Jean Marie Beaubieu, located in what became the 9th or 10th ward of present-day downtown Detroit. The farm fronted 389.41 ft. on the river between Dequindre St. and St. Aubin Ave., and ran back 3 mi., as did all the old French farms. James was always active in personally managing the affairs of the farm. He and his family lived in a

2-story frame house at the corner of Dequindre and Atwater streets. In 1835, he sold the farm to Cullen Brown for $20,000, then rem. to a house on the Campus Martius site, on which later stood the Detroit Opera House. (Mr. Brown, however, paid only $5000 down, and nothing thereafter.)

On Feb. 1, 1828, Pres. John Q. Adams appointed James Witherell as Secretary of the Territory of Michigan under Gov. Louis Cass, a post which he held until July 21, 1830. In his new position, James was second in command. During Gov. Cass' frequent and prolonged absences, James Witherell served as Acting Governor, making many judicial and military appoinments. A detailed chronology of his official acts as Secretary can be seen in the Pioneer Society Report.[2]

James retired to his farm at the age of 71, and d. at his residence in Detroit, Jan. 9, 1838. Both the state legislature and state supreme court passed eulogistic resolutions, and adjourned as an act of respect. At a meeting of the bar of the state supreme court held the following day, resolutions of mourning and respect were also adopted. He was bur. in the Russell St. Cem., and later re-interred in Elmwood Cem. Detroit's Witherell Street was named in his honor. Judge James Witherell is remenbered, in the words of his grandson, Senator Thomas Witherell Palmer, as follows:

> "I remember him over a chasm of sixty years, he appears to me as stern and inflexible when occasion demanded, but a man of most excellent humor, ordinarily. From the fact that he was one of the few served continuously for eight years in the struggle for independence, I should say that he was a man of will persistence, and endurance. He appears to have acquitted himself well wherever he was placed. He was a man of fixed purpose and indomitable will. I should say that he was a man of stuff, of character; that kind of character which endures to the end; that kind of character which is prophetic in its tendencies, which fills the possessor with hope and the assurance that the cause which he has espoused must prevail. He was but a type of the thousands who offered their all upon the altar of their country. As we look back upon the War of the Revolution and analyze the position in which our fathers were placed before and after the Declaration of Independence, our reverence for their characters must grow with recurring years."

Issue of James and Amy (all b. Fair Haven, Vt.):

526. JAMES CULLEN C. (Lieut.) b. July 14, 1791. Entered Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt. in 1808, but left, moving with his father's family in 1810 to Detroit, Mich. There he was taken prisoner by the British at the surrender of the city, and sent to Kingston, Ontario, Canada. He was paroled, and went to W. Poultney, Vt., where he remained an invalid for about a year, and d. Aug. 26, 1813.

527. SARAH MYRAH or SALLY MIRA b. Sept. 16 or 6, 1792. m. Col. Joseph Watson. Her husband became a prisoner of the British upon the surrender of Detroit, Mich., and was sent to Kingston, Ontario, Canada, where he was released on parole. He then went to W. Poultney, Vt. Sarah d. March 22, 1818, while visiting Poultney. Ch.: 3 sons, 2 of which reached manhood. The following elegy to Sarah was supposedly written by a sister of George Warren, who res. in Fair Haven, Vt.:[3]

Monody.

To the Memory of Sally M. Watson.

Low in the grave, where solemn darkness reigns,
The friend, the sister, and the wife is laid;
Slow moulder to the dust her dear remains,
And pensive yews the sacred relics shade.

The spring returns, but ah! to her no more the spring its wonted animation brings;
While weeping friends her early fate deplore,
The plaintive muse her rustic requiem sings.

'T was her's to cheer, to bless, and to console,
To give connubial life its sweetest zest;
To cause the white winged hours more blyths to roll,
And check the sign from sorrow's heaving breast.

Elate she left the city's[4] brilliant scene,
The midnight ball and splendid revel gay,
Well pleased to seek her native village green,
Amid the scenes of early youth to stray.

Here was the scene to pensive memory dear,
Here her loved babe's unconscious ashes sleep;
And all the mother yearned to drop a tear
On that spot, where erst she loved to weep.

Ah! little dreamed the friend her worth, who knew
And hailed her presence with a kindred joy,
That her warm heart, to love and friendship true,
So soon would rest beside her sleeping boy.

Ah! little thought the friend, within whose heart
Her worth, her tenderness and virtue dwell,
That while he wept in agony to part,
Her tender accents breathed a last farewell.

Pale sleep the moonbeams on her lowly grave,
And round that hallow'd spot young sylphs shall stray;
And while night's tears and pensive snow drops lave.
The sorrowing must thus pours her plaintive lay.

And hark! responsive to the rustic notes,
Seraphs repeat to us the soothing strain,
And soft and low the melting music floats;
Forbear to weep--for her to die was gain.

528. BETSY MATILDA or BETSY MATILDY b. 1793. m. Dr. Ebenezer Hurd. Betsy was a woman of extensive and varied reading, and a good conversationalist. She had a great memory and much imagination. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Detroit, Mich. for many years. She d. 1852 in Chicago, Ill., and was bur. in Detroit. 8 ch.

529. MARY AMY b. Oct., 1795. m. (1821) Thomas Palmer (b. Conn., Feb. 4, 1789, d. Aug. 3, 1868, in Detroit, Mich.). She d. March 19, 1874. She was a person of superior understanding, high ideals, and was lenient towards others. She was interested in politics and loved her country. She was a sincere, quiet, charitable Methodist Christian, and was one of the originators of the Protestant Orphan Asylum in Detroit, and for many years was connected with it in an official capacity. Ch.: Thomas W., Julia Elizabeth, 5 others. Their son, Thomas Witherell Palmer (b. Detroit, Jan. 25, 1830, d. June 1, 1913, in Detroit) succeeded Thomas W. Ferry as U. S. Senator from Mich. in 1883. In 1889, he was appointed by President Benjamin Harrison as Minister to Spain, a post he kept until 1891. In 1892 he was Pres. of the Columbian Exposition in Chicago, Ill. The Palmer family grew very prominent in Detroit, and gave Palmer Park to the city. The Merrill-Palmer School was endowed by Mrs. Palmer. Thomas Witherell Palmer was twice nominated by Mich. as a candidate for the U. S. presidency at the Republican convention.

*530. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HAWKINS b. Aug. 4, 1797.

531. JAMES B. b. May 12, 1799. He became a midshipman in the U. S. Navy, and was engaged in chastising the pirates of the West Indies. He d. of "malignant fever" (prob. yellow fever), Oct. 20, 1822, on passage from Havana, Cuba to Hampton Roads, Va., while aboard the U. S. schooner, Peacock. The following elegy was written upon his death:[3]

To the Memory of James B. Witherell

Tho' lost to friends, to country, and to fame,
Ere glory's annals had enrolled his name;
And with his brave companions doomed to sleep
In the rough bosom of the stormy deep;
Tho' Art no monumental tribute raise,
No trophied marble to record his praise;
O! say, shall the remembrance of the brave
Forever perish in oblivion's wave?
Will not the tributary music bestow
Some mournful chapletto adorn his brow?
In her sad strains hapless fate rehearse,
While sacred friendship consecrates the verse.
What opening virtues grac'd his youthful mind;
The hero and the scholar were combin'd;
A glorious emulation, and so rare
That all might envy, tho' so few can share;
Averse to foolish overweening pride
So oft to vice and ignorance allied,
Which swells the selfish and contracted mind
Beyond the sphere for which it was designed;
A generous spirit marked his short career,
And rising greatness was implanted there.
Ardent for fame, impatient to sustain
Columbia's glory on the raging main,
The young aspirant left his native shore,
To which fate doom'd him to return no more!
Alas! untimely lost in youthful bloom,

An early victim to a wat'ry tomb.
Accept, lamented youth, this friendly lay,
'Tis the last tribute that the muse can play;
One who but lately know, yet knew thee well,
And bids thee now a long, a last farewell.

Detroit, riding in a carriage as far as Buffalo, N. Y., and making the remainder of the journey through Canada on horseback. In Detroit, he entered the law firm of Governor and Judge William Woodbridge, under whom he studied. He was admitted to the bar of the Territorial Court in 1819, and began to practice before the U. S. Supreme Court on the motion of Daniel Webster, the well known American statesman and orator.

Other public offices that Benjamin held subsequently were: Judge of the county court (1823-24); Justice of the Peace (1824, 1824); District Attorney for St. Clair District (appointed by his father, James, in 1828); Judge of the Detroit Recorder's Court (1828, 40-42, and 62-64); Probate Judge (1834-35); Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney (1835-39); member of the convention in Ann Arbor, Mich. (1836) that resulted in Mich. becoming a state; State Senator (1840-41); Judge of the District Criminal Court (1843-50), the district comprising Wayne, Washtenaw, and Jackson counties; Regent of the State University (1848); delegate to the Constitutional Convention (1850); president of a citizen's meeting (1855) which organized a corporation and built a railroad to Toledo, Ohio; City Historiographer (1855-67); Assoc. Justice of the Supreme Court (1857); Wayne County Circuit Judge (1857-67); Superior Court Judge (1858); President of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument Assoc.; and for many years, President of the Mich. State Historical Society. Military offices he held at various times included Judge Advocate General, Brigadier-General, and Major General of the Militia.

Benjamin Witherell founded the village of Cassandra (named after his 3rd wife) in 1836, in Section 15 of Greenfield township, but it was not successful, and disappeared the following year. He wrote many articles on Michigan history, under the pen-name of Hamtramck (after Capt. Hamtramck, a former resident of a house in Detroit in which he and his father's family once lived). He knew so much about the early history of Detroit that his close friends called him a "Walking Historical Dictionary of Detroit." Examples of his published historical writings can be found in the Detroit Free Press, and in his paper entitled "Reminiscences of the North-West," published in Coll. State Hist. Soc. Wisc. 3 : 297-337 (1857).

He was one of the corporators of the First Protestant Church of Detroit, one of the first trustees of the First Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1822, helped to organize the Bible Society (1831), was active and influential in moral reforms, and helped to establish the common school system in Detroit. He was kind in disposition, and especially friendly with the French residents. He was fond of music, playing the flute and piccolo, and was also an accomplished storyteller. The humorists of Detroit gave him the nickname of Big Fat Hog Witherell--but this was not applied for any other reason than because he frequently used his initials, B. F. H. He was a popular man.

Benjamin d. June 22, 1867, after a stroke of apoplexy, and after having partaken freely of strawberries the previous evening. A portrait of this distinguished gentleman is on display in the Detroit Historical Building on Woodward Ave.

"My Dad"

To whom do I go when my toys are worn?
A hole's in my shoe and my pants are torn?
To whom can I go where I'm never a bother?
Why of course I'll go to my very own father.

Who buys me nice clothes and all I can eat?
Who thinks I'm just right, tho I'm all hands and feet?
Who watches me always with eyes full of pride?
Why the very best Dad in the whole world wide.

So when I'm grown up and no more a lad
And have some sons to call me "Dad"
Wouldn't you guess I'll want to be
The kind of father Dad is to me?

SUPPLEMENTARY LISTS

The following pages contain additional genealogical data on the Witherell/Wetherell/Witherill family of New England. However, owing to the limited scope of the sources from which this information was drawn, and/or time limitations, the compilers were unable to assimilate this material into the "main line." Further research may yet turn up connections. In cases where several supplementary lists appear to originate in the same geographical area, the reader is referred to these by number, inasmuch as the several lists may have a common ancestor. Throughout this book, the term "supplementary list" is abbreviated "SL." Thus, for example, "SL 1 #3" is shorthand for saying "the third individual in Supplementary List number 1."

He learned the trade of carriage maker with Olney Read in Providence, R. I., and began his own business in 1876 as carriage builder and repairer. Eventually, he employed 20-25 skilled mechanics, and had two establishments--one at 7 Sherman St., and another at 12 Bowery St., both in Newport. On Jan. 12, 1874 he joined the Newport Light Infantry as a Private, and was elected a member of Newport Artillery Co., in which he was promoted to Adjutant. At various times he was Asst. Adjutant, Inspector, and Paymaster-General of the state troops. He served on various governors' staffs and commissions. From 1892 to 1895 he was Colonel and aide-de-camp on the personnel of Gov. D. Russell Brown. On the staff of Gov. Elisha Dyer (1898-1900), he was also Colonel and aide-de-camp. He later served also on the staff of Gov. William Gregory, and was appointed by him, on June 13, 1900, as Commissioner to re-district the city of Providence. Earlier, Gov. Brown appointed him as a member of the commission having charge of the opening up and improving of Salt Pond Harbor on Block Island. Another position he held (1900-3) was Police Commissioner of Newport. At the inauguration of President William McKinley in 1897, Col. Wetherell was given a position on Gen. Horace Porter's staff. He also took part in the inaugural parade of Pres. Theodore Roosevelt in 1905. Fort Wetherell, on Conanicut Island in Narragansett Bay, R. I., was named for him. He d. ?

Supplementary List No. 34[1]

(See also SL 5, SL 21, SL 22, SL 28, SL 30, SL 57, and SL 66.)

There are at least two theories in regard to the possible placement of Amos Witherell (no. 1 on this list.)

One possible clue is the fact that Amos's grand daughter, Ruth Stetson Witherell (SL 34 #11) died the same year (1825) that another Ruth Stetson Witherell (no. 649) was born, and both lived in Pembroke, Mass. Ruth (no. 649) was dau. of Alden (no. 313), who was son of Josiah (no. 146), b. 1754, who would probably have been of the same generation as Amos (b. 1740). Josiah and Amos, both of Pembroke, may therefore have been brothers, i.e., sons of Theophilus (no. 63).

Other evidence, however, suggests that Amos Witherell may have had a different parentage. Amos was born in Bridgewater, Mass. A Nathaniell Wetherell (perh. no. 49) married in Bridgewater in 1755, prob. his 2nd marriage. This leads to speculation that perhaps the wife of Nathaniell's son, Nathaniell, Jr., b. 1717 (no. 111) may have been in Bridgewater at the time of the birth of Amos (1740). One child of Amos was named Nathaniel (SL 34 #8), perhaps after Amos's supposed father.

Appendix 5 : Civil War Letters

Introduction

Young Henry Albert Witherell (no. 1421) was barely seventeen when he found himself marching smartly to the beat of northern patriotism. Ft. Sumner, So. Carolina, was fired upon April 12, 1861. Henry turned seventeen two weeks later on April 26, 1861. Within seven months he was wearing a blue coat in one of the most devastating civil wars the world has seen.

The following letters, which Henry wrote to his sister, Helen (Witherell) Hastings (no. 1420), were found a few years ago by Henry's granddaughter, Eleanor Trenholm Overfield, well preserved and in remarkably good condition. Fourteen in number they range from January 13, 1862, a few months after enlistment, until November 14, 1864, two weeks before discharge. They trace the lines of a young New Englander filled with wide-eyed exuberance and bravado who subtly turns "tough as a biled owl".

He enlisted in the 32nd Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment November 1, 1861, as a foot soldier. After one-and-a-half years he was detailed to the Commissary Dept. where he remained until a few months before discharge. Apparently he spent his entire three year enlistment with the Army of the Potomac, in northern Virginia. This Army, defender of Washington, D. C. and antagonist to Robert E. Lee's daring Army of Northern Virginia, was the War's best equipped and supplied. Unfortunately, its leadership often was found lacking. Despite this, however, when they had capable general officers their true mettle arose and they fought bravely.

Henry participated in the Peninsula Campaign of 1862 and saw action at Antietam and Fredericksburg. Between battles, because of the stalemate between Lee and the Army of the Potomac, there were spells of inactivity to fill as only soldiers can. But when the army fought the action was deadly and massive.

Our young soldier fought with the Army to within "8 or 9 miles of Richmond" and stood among the Union troops at the seige of Petersburg, Virginia. Within five months of Henry's discharge and return to his home town in Warwick, Mass., both Petersburg and Richmond had fallen and shortly thereafter the bloody war had ended.

These letters are included in this book not because Henry was a hero; any soldier who puts his life before bullet and cannon is a hero. These letters are included because they describe through the eyes of a participant the most troubled period in the history of the United States--the United States Henry's long ago ancestors helped found.

Henry Albert Witherell (1844-1917)
with his grandchild Eleanor Trenholm

There were other Witherells, of course, who fought in the Civil War (see appendix no. 4). Many died, and others were wounded. They all have their own stories to tell--stories of death and bravery, bullets whining past and bombs bursting nearby and atrocious living conditions. But for now let's listen to Henry as he sits upon a log in the mud of northern Virginia and writes to his sister in far away New England. [1]

Civil War Letters

January 13, 1862. Fort Warren [probably somewhere in Mass.]

Dear Sister,

It is with pleasure that I now take my pen to write you a few lines...it is very fine weather down here now. the first snow fell last night that we have had this winter and most all of the garrison are out snow balling this morning. Alonzo is sick. he was taken night before last with the cholic and was terrible sick for a couple hours but he is better today and will be well in a week if he is careful...the soldiers and prisoners are all in one hospital together. it-ought-not-to-be-so...the prisoners have more liberties than the soldiers a great deal...I like soldiering first rate and if I was free to day I would enlist tomorrow. but we shant always have to soldier. this thing will be settled of in two or three months. the sesesh [sessionists] think it will to. they say it will be better for both sides. they have lost all hopes of England's doing anything. their hopes was that the north would not give up Mason & Slidell[2] and were very much surprised to think they did. but it was the wisest way...

May 30, 1862. Hdq. 32nd Regt., Camp Alexander, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sister,

Having a few minutes to spare I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know that I am well and tough but are somewhat tired. we ordered from Fort Warren at three o'clock monday afternoon and arrived here wednesday at four o'clock. we went from fall river [Mass.] to new york. from there to jersey city [New Jersey] in a boat. arrived in jersey city about nine o'clock tuesday morning. we got our rifles there and started for Philadelphia and arrived there about three in the afternoon and the Ladies gave us a Supper. we stopped there two hours and started for Baltimore and got within ten miles of there and stopped till light for our Col. [colonel] did not dare to have us go through in the dark. there was a new york reg. [regiment] mobbed there the day before but I guess they thought they would not touch a Mass reg. the Union people of that place gave us a supper. we stopped there as much as four hours and then started for Washington and arrived there at four o'clock. it was the pleasantist country that I ever saw between Baltimore and Washington. we passed the Relay house and Anapolis Junction where the R. I. [?] reg. was last spring when we used to hear of the relay house. we used to think it was some great place but there is first nothing but the relay house itself. there is not even a barn but a little log house to keep a horse and so. Washington is not half so much of a place as Warwick [Mass., Henry's hometown]. I never was as disapointed in a place in my life. there is not a decent place in the whole city. the Capitol is not half so much as I expected. the dome is not finished yet. we are encamped about one mile from the capitol at Camp Alexander. we have to sleep down in the dirt and gravel and since we came from Baltimore I have had about half a pound of meat and a few hard breads. I dont know how long we stop here. probably not a great while. Col. Parker is bound to push us in among the rebels if he can and we are bound to push them. all I wat is one chance and they will find out whether I am a Home Guard or not. thank God we have got them [?] (Home Guard) from us [?] it is getting time to put my letter in the office so I must close. you can send [?] your letters to Washington, D. C. in care of Capt. Prescott Co. B. 32 Mass. Reg.

June 6, 1862. Camp near Clouds Mills.[3]

Dear Sister,

I received your kind letter in due time and was very glad to hear from you. we broke up Camp at Washington yesterday at half past eight and arrived here at four. we marched about fifteen miles and I thought twas more than thirty before we got here. we came through Alexandria, Virginia to get here and are about five miles from there and fifteen from Manassas, Va... there are about thirty thousand troops within a few miles of us. the New York sixty ningth are within half a mile of us. they are fifteen hundred strong. were musketed into the service a week ago. they were out three months and was Corcorans reg. they are bound for Richmond and say they will have Corcoran a fight till every man is killed. we are to join some Division soon and are to go with Banks [Major General Nathaniel P. Banks] or McClelland [Major General George B. McClelland] I hope it is with McC. we are now about sixty miles of Jackson [Stonewall Jackson]. the report is that he has been reinforced and is advancing this way. if we go with Banks I guess we shall smell some powder before many days. I dont care how soon it comes. we are good for it. we are about ten miles of the 18th Mass. reg. they were at Port Republic, Va. and have seen some pretty tough times. I saw one of the soldiers yesterday. he says they have lost one hundred men by sickness and one shot and out of the ten hundred and thirty men that came out here they can not muster but five hundred for duty. he said they have no blankets no over coats and not half of them a change of shirts. he said there has been many & many a night that he has laid out in the rain as wet as though he was in a mud puddle. there is not many North that knows what a condition the men are in out here. I guess they would want to get home if they were in the soldiers places. the only way is to draft every able bodied man and raise an army twice as large as it now is and they could lick the Rebels out in one month, they never will make them give up till every man is killed. the Hatteras [Hatteras Inlet, No. Carolina] prisoners at Fort Warren used to say that they would never give up as long as a man lived. they were about fair sample of all of them. there has one man died out of our reg. he was from Me. [Maine] and died with the Typhoid fever. it is getting late so I must close. direct your letter the same as the other.

July 2, 1862. Steamer. Hampton Roads [Va.].

Dear Sister,

....we left Washington monday morning and arrived here this morning and are bound for Richmond.[4] we have just got the news that McClelland has been driven back with the loss of fifteen thousand and our brigade is agoing to reinforce him. they say that the rebels are three to one of him. we shall arrive there before tomorrow morning and perhaps by the 4th we shall have a chance to fire some Salutes. I hope so. our Regt. is in the best of spirits and all they want is Col. Parker to lead them no matter where. we will go wherever he does...

October 27, 1862. Camp near Sharpsburg [Md.].

Dear Sister,

....we are in camp on the Potomac 3 miles from Sharpsburg and the battlefield of Antietam. but I think we are not to rest in Camp many days longer for some parts of the Army has commenced to move already. we have orders to have three days rations on hand & 60 rounds of cartridges in our boxes. a week ago I thought we should go into winter quarters here but it seems there is to be another campaign before winter. we shall probably give Old Stonewall [Stonewall Jackson] & Lee [Robert E. Lee] another chastising before they get to Richmond. they will probably fight pretty smart before they will retreat. and they say here that there will be one of the hardest battles fought within a week that there has been in this war. we are on the advance an shall very likely do our part. I do not think we shall be held as reserves this time as we always have before. I'll warrent you the 32nd will do her part if called upon. we have got pretty well recruited up as to clothing & etc. but there are a great many men sick in hospitals from our co. of the 101 men that went from Concord [Mass.] for Fort Warren the 3rd day of last Dec. only 45 of us are together now...

we have to live in our shelter tents yet and it is pretty cold here to. I tell you I shall be glad when we go into winter quarters and have wooden barracks. I should think that it was as cold here as it is in Mass. & the wind blows tremendously most all of the time...we cannot get anything nor there is nothing to buy. if there was it would not do me any good for I have not had a cent of money this six weeks and no signs of being payed off before the middle of November. this month will make four months wages. they owe me $52 and will make a years pay. this month will make one year. I wonder where I shall be in another year. I hope not in this glorious Army of the Potomac as they call it...

what does Samuel [Helen's husband] find to do this fall. I don't suppose he thinks of enlisting. he could not stand the hardships if he did. they don't realize at home what they have got to come to when they come out here. they dont believe the hard stories we write but I can tell some pretty tough stories when I get home of what I have seen. it is drill time so I must close...

December 28, 1862. Falmouth, Va.

Dear Sister,

....I have just been writing to mother to let her know that she could send a box to me now. I am very anxious to get it for I want my wollen shirts & stockings. we cannot draw anything but white shirts & I wont have them if I dont have any and there is a number of things that I knead very much. I lost everything I had on our march down the peninsular but just the rags I had on. I am situated so now that if I get recruited up again I can hang to my things. our Co. has been detached from the Regt. as Guard for the Division Train. we have an easier time of it when we make a march. we have all of our things carried & when in camp dont have any Guard duty & besides when the 32 has to fight Co. B. is minus. that is a good deal in soldering. this fighting business I dont fancy at all. I am rather nervous where the Shells & bullets fly thick. I saw plenty of it at Antietam[5] & hope never to see any more of it. our Regt. was in the Fredericksburg[6] fight. lost 50 men. Theo Putnams Capt. was killed. Theo was in 24 hours & came out all right. Dan _____ [?] has just been over to see me. he is well but was sick at the time of the Massacre across the River [Fredericksburg] so he stayed behind. Jesse Bridge has been sick with the plurisy but I believe he is getting better now. the rest of the Warwick boys are well. I am tough as a biled owl myself. eat anything I can get hold of that is fit to eat. live in a log house with a fireplace in it. sleep on the ground & drink nothing but cold water. we think if we have a house with a fireplace in it we are all right. guess you would laugh to see my mansion. it is built up a foot and a half with pine logs & our shelter tents on the tops of the logs with a fireplace in one end. it is 5-1/2 feet long & 4 wide. the ridge pole is 5 feet from the ground. to [two] of us resides in it. we cannot stand up in it but have to sit all of the time. we have to do our own cooking & it is rather uncomfortable getting [?]. I have got to be a considerable of a fancy cook. I cook rice, beans, potatoes, make soup, fry stake & make puddings. I make the puddings out of hard bread, a little dried apple, a spoon full of sugar, a spoonfull of pork fat. mix them all together & let them soak over night in 3 fills of water in a Quart cup. I do all of my cooking in a 2 quart cup. the way I bake them is set the cup on some coals, take an old tin plate (if there is one handy. if not take the one you eat on) & put it on the top of the dipper & lay some red hot coales on it so the pudding will bake on the top. I make excellent puddings. it takes me most all of the time to do my cooking. when I get home I agoing to let myself to do house work. the greatest trouble will be is I shall have so many things to do with I shall forget how to do the things.

when you write again I wish you would send me your Picture if you have a spare one. I am agoing to send for the whole families when I get payed off if they can get them taken....

March 5, 1863. Camp near Falmouth, Va.

Dear Sister,

....When you are in Foxboro [Mass.] I wish you would find out if there are any of the Foxboro Boys out here that I knew... you wondered whether the things in my box kept good. most of them was. the pies was not very good...I have thought some of getting a furlough untill today. there was an order issued to stop all furloughs in our Regt. on account of them staying over their time that have already gone. there has been a man sentenced to be shot in our Regt. for desertion. his coffin has arrived already & the whole Division will have to turn out pretty likely. it is rather a hard case to have a man shot for trying to get out of this but if they should all desert we should not have any Army in a short time. so the Generals have to make some examples. I heard that there were thirty men sentenced to be shot in this Army.

I suppose you have heard that Daniel Foster was Dead. he died near Fortress Monroe [Va.]. I think his body was sent home. I saw him a number of times when his Regt. was near Falmouth.

April 25, 1863. Head Quarters Co. B. 32 Mass. Vol. Camp near Falmouth [Va.]

My Dear Sister,

....Tomorrow is my birthday. I shall be 19. this is my second birthday in the Army & I hope the last...I have received a box of Maple Sugar this spring from home. it was first rate. I have received three boxes from home this winter...

September 7, 1863. Beverly Ford, Va.
My Dear Sister,
....I never was healthier in my life. are perfectly content and cherish the idea that I am sometime to get out of the Army. I have stumbled through so far without any serious disaster & hope I shall have the good luck to live through 14 months more. The cross you sent was right with the exception of being rather large. but I very soon made it the right size and I will endeavor to wear it becoming a Soldier of the Army of Uncle Sam. I witnessed the shooting of those unfortunate men that sold themselves for four hundred dollars. then deserted. they belonged to the 118th Penn. Vols. of our Div...conscripts are arriving daily to our Army. the 32d is to get theirs next week. I shall be glad when the Regts. get filled up for the duty is hard for so few men as most of the rgts. have got. You said as I had got a new suit of clothes I had better get a furlough to come home. it aint an easy thing to get a furlough now days. besides I should hardly dare to go Home now. it has been so long since I have been among civilized people that they would laugh at my actions...I have got so I can ride any horse. I take care of a saddle horse at our Brigade Commissary Dept. I much rather ride in a saddle than a Buggy. the saddle for the horse cost fifty dollars & the Bridle twenty three dollars. the bit is silver mounted & it alone cost seven dollars....
March 11, 1864. Commissary Dept. 2nd Brig. 1 Div. 5th Corps.
Dear Sister,
....It has been very rainy here for the past week & today there has been a thunder shower. but for all the rain it don't stop citizens from comeing here to purchase provisions. Yesterday when it was raining like everything a lot of women came along. some of them lived five or six miles from here. I don't know but they would starve if we did not sell to them. they have not got a mouth full to eat at home. the rich & poor are just alike. there is a Lady that comes here by the name of Mrs. Coun [?]. she says she never put her hands into water to work before this was & now she has to come to our Commissarys to beg subsistence for her family.

You wrote that Warwick had filled her quota for the 500,000 men the President called for the first of the winter. I understand he is about to make another call for 200,000. that will be bad for the men at home but it gives the soldiers courage. the larger the Army the better....

Reenlisting is going on very slow in the 32nd now days. I shall not enlist again you can believe. three years a Soldier will do for me.
June 12, 1864. Commissary Dept. 2nd Brig. 1st Div. 5th Corps.
My Dear Sister,

. . . . Our Army is now along the south banks of the Chickahomony [river in Virginia] & are expecting to cross today or tomorrow. our Division lays at the Bottom Bridge & I suppose it is from eight to ten miles from Richmond. There is plenty of Rebs. in our front & they will fight whenever our lines advance. . . I have been in some pretty hot places lately. The shells come pretty close sometimes.

It is very warm weather here. but next month will fetch the hot weather. I hope before that time we shall be in Richmond but I have not much faith in its being taken. if Grant [General U. S. Grant] fights untill he takes it he will have all of the men here killed & will have to get another Army.

July 21, 1864. Commissary Dept. 2nd Brig. 1st Div. 5th Corps.

My Dear Sister,

. . . . I have only four months & seven days more to stay if they dont get me up to the front & kill me off before that time.

I am well at present & having a very good time. it is pretty hot here but I manage to stand it.

Things have been very quiet here in front of Petersburg [Va.] for the last three weeks but this morning the troops had orders to make preparations to advance the seige.

You had ought to be here to see how the troops have got things fixed up at the front. every to [two] has got a bomb proof house & when the Rebs commence shelling they get into their houses.

The Brest works are built about fifteen feet thick & every man has a rifle hole to shoot through & there are shelves built along to lay the ammunition on ready for action.

. . . . I see by the New York Herald of the 19th that Old Abe [Abraham Lincoln] has called for 500,000 more men for soldiers. I wish it was a million.

September 20, 1864. Near the Weldon R. R., Va.

Dear Sister,

It is so dull that I don't know what to do with myself. . . The Captain that has been here all summer left us the 1st of this month and Capt. Y. S. Burdett has come back to our Brigade as Commissary. I am the only man left here that was here when he left us. all the rest have gone home. when he came back he told me to take things easy and do what I liked. . . .

It is very hot here today but the hot weather is not agoing to last many days longer. The 1st of Oct. will find it pretty cool. last year at this time we were at Culpepper [Va.] and some of the troops had built log houses.

. . . . Uncle Edmond Davis is in the hospital wounded. . . .

It is very quiet at the front of our Corps. if you was to go up to the front you would not imagine that the Rebels were near.

every Regiment has its camp regularly laid out with its Company streets and some Regts. have Co. drills everyday. The R. R. is finished from city point up to the Yellow House on the Weldon R. R. and there will be a Depot established soon.

The Negro troops of the 9th Corps and one Div. of the 2nd Corps are engaged in building a line of fortifications to protect our rear and the line is nearly as strong at the front line. There is not much prospect of a fight at present unless the Rebels try us in our rear.

The Army is daily growing larger with recruits. Too many men cannot come. if we had two hundred thousand more fresh men in the field this month the Rebellion could be put down before Old Uncle Abraham's [Lincoln] four years expires. but he is a-going to be Uncle four years longer. so I say I don't know who the People at home wants but give the soldier Abraham. We have been out too long living on hard tack to choose a Copperhead for President to throw away all that has been done. The Rebels are in a tight place now. They have got all they caught. Jeff Davis [president of the Confederacy] wants southern independence or extermination. Give him the latter. Whip him first and then he will be ready for peace on any terms.

November 14, 1864. Camp of 32nd Mass. Vols.

My Dear Sister,

It has been some time since I have heard from you and as I have nothing to occupy my time this morning I will write you a few lines. news is scarce here. Every one has been so much interested in the Presidential election for the past six weeks that there is not much attention given to anything else. everything is very quiet here & nothing to disturb the monotony of a camp life. The picket firing that was always going on in front of Petersburg two months ago has almost entirely died away and it is very seldom that you hear a cannon shot. the troops are busy building comfortable winter quarters. it is getting to be pretty cold. a few flakes of snow fell yesterday. I think that the campaign for this year has closed. it has been long and very severe. Old Abe is reelected and the best thing he can do is to call a draft for 500,000 more men & be ready for an early spring campaign and have troops enough to close the war next year. if the Rebels don't give up before next spring I shall be surprised. [7]

Joseph Williams was over to see me yesterday. he is well and looks natural as can be. his Regiment lays close to my Regt. Elliot Stone [?] is in the same Regt. with him. I heard that A. A. Taylor had been exchanged & was at home.

I am expecting to leave this before many days. I have (13) thirteen more days after today. I shall be glad enough when that time expires. I have been waiting for the 28th of this month for the past three years. My papers are all made out & I shall be mustered out in the field and get my pay and the one hundred [dollar] Bounty in Boston, Mass. I shall start for Washington a fortnight from today and if I have no trouble in settling up I shall be in Warwick, Mass. a fortnight from Saturday next.

Do you live at Mrs. Gales house now. I expect to find it very still & lonesome in W. [Warwick] from all accounts I receive from there.

I am at my Regt. doing duty now. left the Commissary Department last week. My Regt. was transferred from the 2nd to the 3rd Brigade of our Div. and all of the detailed men were recalled to the Regt. I was away 17 months and have had a good time & had a chance to learn to clerk it.

I cannot stop to write any more this morning so I will close. Please write soon and expect this from your brother,

H. A. Witherell

Footnotes

1 Excerpts were taken from most of the letters, presenting the most interesting passages. A few letters will be presented in their entirety.

2 Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, had appointed James M. Mason of Virginia as Commissioner to England and John Slidell of Louisiana as Commissioner to France to enlist their support for the southern cause. Shortly after leaving for Europe they were captured and sent to Boston as prisoners but were released on January 1, 1862, and allowed to continue their journey.

3 In place of a stamp Henry Wilson, then Senator from Massachusetts and later Vice President under U. S. Grant, franked the envelope to this letter with his signature so that it could be sent free of charge.

4 The Seven Days Battles, during the Peninsular Campaign, in which the Union suffered 15,000 casualties and the Confederates 20,000.

5 The Battle of Antietam, near Sharpsburg, Maryland, on September 17, 1862, was the bloodiest single day of the War. There were almost 24,000 casualties on both sides that day.

6 Battle of Fredericksburg in Virginia, December 11, 12, and 13, 1862.

7 The Rebels indeed did surrender the following spring.

1. THE WILL OF WILLIAM WITHERELL (no. 7) (ca. 1627-1691): FROM FIRST BOOK OF BRISTOL COUNTY PROBATE RECORDS, PAGE 50. (WRITTEN IN THE HAND OF JN^{o} CARY)

In the name of god Amen. I William Witherell Sen^{r} of Taunton in the County of [Bristol] in the colony of Newplimouth in New England, being very sicke, But at present through Divine Goodness of sound judgment & memory, Doe make & constitute this to be my last will & testament in mann^{r} and form following.

Imp^{r} My soule I commit to our Blessed lord Jesus: and my Body to the Earth to be decently entered by my children, In hopes of a joyful resurection.

Secondly As to my outward estate: I give my halfe a North Purchase to my two sons, William & John, to be equally divided between them to be to them & their heirs and assignes for ever. I give my five accers of upland lyeing up at Timothy meadow to my son William Witherill and his heirs & assignes for ever.

Thirdly To Jerimiah the son of my son William I give all that land comprehended in A: Deed I made to my son Ephraim, who being deceased: left unto my dispose again. I give it all (as expressed in said deed to Ephraim) unto my Grandson Jerimiah to be to him his heirs and assignes for ever.

Fourthly Ten accers of land lyeing on the South side of the pond by my house to begin at the place where the house stood which William Wood lived in & to run Southward from it, this I give to my Daughter Dorithy Wood & to her heirs born of her Body.

Fiftly As to my other lands, haveing by deeds of gift already disposed of them to my sons, My will is that they should enjoy them severally according to those deeds.

Sixthly My will is that what my wiffe brought with her be wholly at her dispose. According to agreement between us before mariage also that my sons pay to her annually what was promised her by said agreement before our mariage, together, also my said wife to enjoy my stocke of cattle & household stuffe, so much of it as the sons cause, during the time of her widowhood & Bearing my Name, And then what is left: after my wife's decease or mariage, to be divided equally between my sons. Also to my wife one white yearling Heffer to be wholly at her dispose.

Seventhly I make my sons William & John executors to this my last Will & testament. In wittnes whereof I the said William Witherill Sen^{r} have hereunto jott my hand and seale this fifteenth day of August Sixteen hundred Ninety one.

Sealed & Signed by sd W^{m} Witherill William Witherill

14. LETTER FROM DANIEL WETHERELL (no. 9) TO GOV. LEETE[1]

New London, July 25, 1682.

Honrd Sir. These maye informe yo^{r} Hon^{r} that lately arrived at Easthampton on Longe Iland a Catch and 2 small Sloopes with about 30 or 40 privateers or rather pirates; one of the Sloopes laye some time at Plumbe Iland where 5 of her men left her and came hither, the rest went for the Baye Colonie and at Nantasket men with more of their companions and gave chase to a Sloope of Mr. Isack Arnold's y^{t} was bound to Virginia and tooke her wth a thousand pound cargoe as he informes me: the Ketch was aboute 130 tunn, which they made sale of at Easthampton to one Hutchinson of Bostone, and with part of y^{e} mony bought another Sloope of Capt. Hubbard of y^{e} same place; which came over to this harbour with eight privateers pretending to buy some provisions, but bought not any, only a little bread. I doe suppose they intend to supply themselves by piracy. The next day after they were gone, I receaved the enclosed, which gives account of the surprizall of the third small Sloope by the goveno^{r} of Rhoade Island: Since which here arived Mr. Jonas Clarke, bound to Southold, to put Mr. Arnold ashoare there, and from thence to Conetticutt, who was chassed by that privateer y^{t} went out of this Harbour and lyes still about Fisher's Iland and Garner's Iland: but they were too nimble for y^{e} privateers, and came into this harbour, where they desired some men and armes to secure them, haveing as they s^{d} a very considerable cargoe on boarde. I durst not without yo^{r} Hon^{rs} authority impress any men, but wee sent them armes and ammunition; and the winde bloweing favorable, they set sayle yesterday morning, and I hope are got safe over, although several persons informed me they saw the privateers pursue them, but their wings were too short; so they tacked, and I sawe them, as I conceave, goe in for Fisher's Iland.

Sir, my humble desire is that yo^{r} Hon^{r} with yo^{r} honrd Councell wolld please to informe what to doe in these exigencys, for they are yet wayting for to take all they can master, being well armed and fitted with granados for y^{e} worke. I earnestly begg yo^{r} Hon^{rs} advice in this weighty concerne, wherein men's lives and estates are dayly in hazard, and shall wayte for an answer frome yo^{r} Hon^{r} & Councell: Meanwhile shall rest yo^{r} Hon^{rs} humble servantt to be commanded, Daniell Wetherell.

A Catch of M^{rs} Raymonds comeing from Virginia was spoken with off Block Iland eight days since; it is not yet arrived; wee feare shee is taken by some of these Rogues.

Honrd Sir, Since the imprisonment of those privateers at Rhoade Iland, they have confessed of their roberys in Virginia.

15. LETTER FROM THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL TO DANIEL WETHERELL (no. 9)[1]

The Governor and Council[2] to Mr. Wetherell.

Hartford, July 28, 1682.

Sir: Your letter of the 25th instant we have rece^{d} wth those inclosed from Gov^{r} Sandford and Mr. Arnold, and are sorry for his great losse, and doe commend the prudence of Gov^{r} Sandford in securing those 6 pirates that cam into their harbour, and should have been glad you had done the like wth those that came to your town; and if the like opportunity be given, we desire that it may be taken, for the securing of them. Your accommodating of Mr. Clarke wth armes and ammunition, we approve of, and should allso as well approved of your pressing men for his securety, if he would have payd them their wages for the time they whould be in his service. We doe doubt of your abillity in fitting out a good vessell of sufficient strength to deal with these robbers, and therefore cannot see reason to order you so to doe; yet if they still be in those parts or should come wthin your reach, we would have you use the most prudent ways and means to seiz and secure them by strength, and we think y^{t} yo^{r} owne authority wth our advice may sufficiently bear out the app^{r}hending of theeves and keeping peace &c by imploying persons of good conduct to govern and order the affaire; whoe may be suitable, you best know, upon the place. Allso it may be good to give notice to all vessells that are passing upon the coast, of the danger that they be advised not to goe out of o^{r} partes untill these pirates be gon off the coast, or surprized.
